French Report Slight Siegfried Line Gains

FBI Takes Charge of Watch Over U. S. Peace

Canal Zone Put Under Army Rule; Navy to Patrol Sea 200 Miles Out

By William V. Nessly.

In two main series of actions, civil and military, the Government moved on a wide scale yesterday to forestall violations of American neutrality.

Executive orders, statements and regulations issued during the day brought these developments:

On land, the FBI was directed to take charge of a Nation-wide campaign against spying, sabotage, subversive activities, and other neutrality violations, and local enforcement authorities were called on by President Roosevelt to co-operate.

The Panama Canal was placed under full military control for the first time in a period of United States peace, and a vast Naval-Coast Guard patrol of waters adjacent to this continent was established to give notice if belligerent ships appear.

In the Pacific, the aircraft carrier Langley and 12 long-range planes were dispatched to the Philippines to enforce neutrality.

Beyond 1914 Moves

The day brought a continuation of swift governmental moves, far beyond anything undertaken in 1914, to guard the nation against surging effects of Europe's hostilities.

As Attorney General Murphy declared, "there will be no repetition of the confusion and luxity of 20 years ago which caused havoc." President Roosevelt issued a statement to the country saying:

"The Attorney General has been requested by me to instruct the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice to take charge of investigative work in matters relating to espionage, sabotage and violations of the neutrality regulations.

"This task must be conducted in a comprehensive and effective manner on a national basis, and all information must be carefully sifted out and correlated in order to avoid confusion and irresponsibility.

Turn Over Information

"To this end, I request all police officers, sheriffs and all other law-enforcement officers in the United States promptly to turn over to the nearest representative of the Federal Bureau of Investigation any information obtained by them relating to espionage, counter-espionage, sabotage, subversive activities and violations of the neutrality laws."

The patrol of Atlantic waters, to extend out some 200 miles from shore, already has been taken up by two Naval destroyers and two Coast Guard cutters, while four other large cutters, each with a plane, had been started to the Atlantic from the Pacific to participate.

In addition, cancellation of training cruises of Naval reservists made possible the assigning of 11 other destroyers to the task. In the background, also available for patrol duty upon some reconditioning, are 116 more destroyers and Coast Guard craft, now laid up.

Hancock Named to Board

The patrol, reaching from New England to the Panama Canal, is intended to give notice of the presence of any belligerent craft in this part of the world, so that American shipping can be advised and embassies here of the warships' nationalities can be told that American vessels are in the area where their fighting craft are operating.

Some 40 of the ships laid up that could be used for patrol duty would require very little if any reconditioning. Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary, said it would take from two weeks to a month to renovate the others sufficiently to use them.

Cutters ordered from the Pacific are the Spencer, from Cordova, Alaska; the Ingram, from Port Angeles, Wash., and the Hamilton and Duane, from Oakland, Calif.

Meanwhile, John Hancock, New York banker, was added to the newly created War Resources Board, charged with forming a program of mobilization of industry in case of war.

The Treasury Department placed Basil Harris, vice president of the United States Lines, in charge of much of its neutrality enforcement

Treasury Acts To Put Teeth In Neutrality

Basil Harris, Ship Line Official, Named Key Man in Move To Enforce Act

By Felix Cotten

A shake-up among high Treasury officials occurred yesterday as plans went forward to make this country's neutrality airtight.

Resignation of Stephen B. Gibbons, who has been Assistant Secretary in charge of the Customs Bureau, the Coast Guard, and the Narcotics Bureau since June 6, 1933, was announced by Secretary Morgenthau. He is leaving the Treasury to become vice president of a bank.

Morgenthau also revealed that Basil Harris, Rye, New York, vice president of the United States Lines, would be sworn in today as Commissioner of Customs. He will succeed Commissioner James H. Moyle, who will be transferred to the position of assistant to the Secretary.

President's Key Man

Harris, officials said, virtually will be the key man in the enforcement of President Roosevelt's neutrality proclamations.

Besides his title of commissioner of customs, he will have the title of Assistant to the Secretary, and will act as adviser both to Morgenthau and the President on the shipping aspects of neutrality.

Morgenthau, officials said, feels that he has "the best man in shipping" to handle the vast job of policing the country's ports to see that violations of the neutrality proclamations do not occur.

Harris, of course, will have full charge of the customs service. The Narcotics Bureau and the Coast Guard—other agencies under Gibbons' direction—will be transferred to Herbert Gaston, formerly assistant to the Secretary in charge of press relations and now Assistant Secretary.

Supervises Secret Service

Gaston, in addition, will have supervision over the Secret Service and the special departmental committee to co-ordinate activities of Treasury law enforcement agencies, of which Elmer L. Irey, chief of the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau, is head.

Thus far Gaston's duties have been general in character. During Morgenthau's absence he assisted Undersecretary John W. Hanes in handling all Treasury problems. The committee to co-ordinate enforcement activities heretofore has reported directly to Morgenthau. Gaston, therefore, will take this work off his chief's shoulders.

Resignation Effective September 30.

Gibbons' resignation will become effective September 30. He will go on leave shortly, however, it is understood. The Coast Guard and Narcotics Bureau, as a result, will be transferred to Gaston immediately.

Harris has been in the shipping business since he was graduated from Princeton University in 1912. During most of this time, he has been with the United States Lines and its predecessor companies.

Shortly before the outbreak of the war, the President ordered a thorough search of the Nazi liner Bremen and ships of other potential belligerents. His object was to safeguard against their being converted into sea raiders. It will be Harris' job to continue this type of work as well as to see that arms and munitions are not shipped from American ports without a State Department license, to watch for transportation of recruits to belligerents, and the like.

Air Raids Back Drive on Saar; Poles Rally, Fight to Save Warsaw

Nazi Army Held 30 Miles From Capital; City Digs In for Last Stand

By Lloyd Lehrbas,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Warsaw, Sept. 6 (12:10 p. m.; 6:10 a. m., E. S. T., Wednesday). A battle for Warsaw raged 30 miles north of here today, couriers reported, with the "Poles fighting like lions" and holding back the invaders despite repeated thrusts led by tanks.

The Poles were described as holding the invaders on a line between Pultusk, 30 miles directly north of Warsaw, and Plonsk, 35 miles northwest of this city.

It was announced that the Poles had lost Pultusk once in the battle and then retaken it. Pultusk is about 60 miles east of Cienchanow, where one wing of the last-ditch defenders formerly was pivoted.

Six Planes Shot Down

German planes raided the north section of Warsaw just before noon, and an official radio announcement said six planes were shot down.

More than a dozen terrific explosions were heard from the direction of the railway bridge across the Vistula and the East Station, which was bombed two days ago. One train, waiting to carry refugees toward Wilno and Riga, was last reported at the station.

A ranking staff officer, slightly wounded, who returned briefly from the scene of battle, said the Polish forces were defending themselves stoutly, holding their lines and doggedly beating off the German thrusts.

Tanks Reported Destroyed

With heavy tanks as a vanguard, the officer said, the Germans succeeded in piercing the Polish line in several places, but the Poles successfully outflanked the penetrating columns and captured and destroyed many of the tanks.

The officer assured members of his family here that the situation was favorable.

Defenders of the city were preparing for a desperate defense at the very gates of the city if the battle at Pultusk eventually went against them.

The Polish radio interrupted a musical program to appeal to all Warsaw citizens to report to the nearest police station armed with spades to dig trenches around the capital.

Troops Dig In on River

Resistance lines were being drawn outside the city's limits and the Poles were expected to put up their bitterest fight for their beloved capital.

Reinforced Polish troops dug in tonight along the Bug River only 20 miles north of Warsaw.

A major battle seemed to be impending, but Poles who remained in Warsaw after hasty evacuation of the city did not expect to see the "German visitors" tonight.

The civilian government had gone to Lublin, 70 miles to the southeast, according to diplomatic reports to Budapest and Stockholm. Gone also were the foreign embassies and legations and scores of thousands of civilians, including nearly all foreigners.

Enemy at Plonsk

The most menacing of all Germany's invading columns was moving down from the northwest. Reliable indications during the morning were that at that time it had not yet reached the river Bug.

A Polish communique said:

"The enemy now has reached a line between Chiechanow and Plonsk. (Plonsk is about 35 miles from Warsaw.)

"There is no change on the East Prussian front.

"On the Warta-Szeczercow-Kamlensk line, sharp fighting is in prog-

Basel, Switzerland (near French, German and Swiss frontier), Sept. 6.—First line pill boxes of Germany's Siegfried Line were seized tonight by veteran troops from the French Maginot line.

One of the first German advance posts which fell, it was reported, was a lone fort opposite Sarreguemines, a French town opposite the Saar. It was said the fort was taken after very little fighting when French troops occupied the wooded hills on both sides of the frontier road.

Germans Quit Advance Posts

The Germans were said to have retired with little resistance from advance posts to the main Siegfried forts, five and ten kilometers behind the border. (A kilometer is about ⅝ of a mile.)

Although planes of both sides made frequent flights watching troop movements, there was little fighting in the air.

Reports reaching Basel concerning the entire French maneuver indicated that their deepest advance was limited to a few kilometers along the eastern part of the Saar Basin, where the main forts of the Siegfried Line elbow back along the old Saar frontiers.

French Veterans Used

Foreign military observers, watching the action from Switzerland, viewed the action as a mere construction of the no-man's-land left between the Maginot and Siegfried Lines during peacetime.

It was noted that the only French troops employed were the veteran khaki-clad fortress troops, with a few conscripts and mobilized units.

Observers believed it would be a week at least before the French would complete their first careful advance through the pillbox outposts and launch a drive against the Siegfried Line's main forts.

German dispatches indicated that the Nazi land forces have been instructed to fight a purely defensive war for the present, in the hope that French strength will be spent against the Siegfried Line while the German drive against Warsaw speeds on.

Nazis Battle Propaganda

German aviators along the western front were reported to have received orders to concentrate on blocking British planes distributing propaganda pamphlets.

French planes kept clear of German territory today save when accompanying troop movements as an air cover. They seldom met German fighters.

Dispatches from Germany indicated that Marshal Goering, commander of the Nazi air force, was withholding his strength for use on French concentration centers and communication lines when France launches a drive against the Siegfried main line.

The French move into German territory was considered a tremendous stimulus to the already high French morale.

Poilus along the Rhine commented: "It is excellent that for once in French history the fighting is on German soil."

Swiss Watch Maneuvers

Residents of this city, transformed into an armed fortress by mobilization of the Swiss army, today watched the French in the Maginot Lines and the Germans in the Siegfried fortifications prepare to give and take offensives.

Basel's frontiers with France and Germany were closed to all but

Army Past Krakow, May Shell New Polish Capital Today

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 6.—Germany's motorized troops rolled forward over Polish roads tonight at such speed that German observers said Lublin, present seat of the Polish government, might be under German artillery fire tomorrow.

Experts said the advance, which today sped through the ancient city of Krakow without resistance, was ahead of the previously prepared schedule. Tonight the Germans were reported 18 miles east of Krakow, the "heart of Poland."

The German soldiers, moving through southwest Poland toward the east and north, were described as surprised that Poland's army was not putting up a stronger fight.

Meanwhile, no action whatsoever was reported on the French frontier. Officials insisted Germany would not be the first to strike there.

Thrust Nears Arms Center

Several foreign reports that Berlin has been bombed were denied. Foreigners in the capital have seen no signs of enemy plane attacks.

These were announced as new strokes against Poland:

Capture of Kielce, about 100 miles southwest of Warsaw, and within 50 miles of Sandomierz, seat of the Polish arms industry.

Capture of "tens of thousands" of prisoners in the Corridor (Pomorze) and elsewhere in northern Poland.

Capture of 60 field guns.

Capture of Bydgoszcz (Bromberg) 140 miles southwest of Warsaw, while German troops crossed the Netze River to the south of Bydgoszcz.

Military headquarters reported tonight that "at least 18" Polish airplanes were destroyed by the German air force on the eastern front during the day.

The official German news agency, Deutsches Nachtrichten Buero, reported the entire basis of Poland's war industry had vanished as a result of German occupation of the Silesian industrial areas.

The news agency said German troops now control all Poland's industry, all zinc and lead production, 95 per cent of her coal mines and 50 per cent of her nitrate-producing area.

More Cities Captured

The text of today's communique follows:

"Army operations in Poland on September 5 progressed on schedule. Mountain and motorized troops in a broad front forced the northern exits of the Beskiden Mountains and are in swift attack on Novy Sacz.

"Forces pushing from the south and west toward Krakow drove the enemy back into this town. The

London Prepares To 'Disorganize' German Economy

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 6.—Britain today disclosed sweeping measures to wreck German economy by blockade, welded her military forces into a unified body and announced that the first foray of German bombing planes toward English coasts had been repulsed.

Plans for an economic offensive against Germany were disclosed in a communique which said the new ministry of economic warfare would correspond broadly to the ministry of blockade set up late in the World War.

Details of what the ministry intends to do were not disclosed but the communique said its aim "is to disorganize the economy of the enemy so as to prevent him from effectively carrying on the war."

English Fire on Own Planes

"Economic warfare must be regarded as a vital offensive arm complementary to the operation of the three services," it said.

The government started a blockade of Germany the minute war was declared. It was announced that all ships bound for Germany or carrying contraband would be stopped.

Organization of the ministry of economic warfare has been in progress for two years, the communique said, and its staff was selected some months ago. It will work in closest touch with the French government.

An expert French delegation led by Paul Morand already is in London.

The government announced that the German freighter Inn had been sunk in "mid-Atlantic," but no details were disclosed. This was believed the fourth German ship sunk by the British since the war started.

The ministry of information said tonight that no enemy planes reached England during the morn-

Markets Relax, Staples Soar In Record Gain

Trade in Government Bonds Reaches All-Time High on Stock Exchange

Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, Sept. 6.—The unprecedented war buying fervor in the Nation's financial and commodity markets relaxed enough to give a slight breathing spell today, but prices of several staples basic in the Nation's economy continued to bulge spectacularly.

Grains, sugar and livestock again went kiting, and although price advances were less general than yesterday, such statistical measures as are available showed the biggest two-day gain in the general price level of major staples in modern times.

In the stock market, the sweeping price advances in steels, sugars, chemicals and other "war babies" since Friday attracted substantial offerings, and the advance was checked. Declines were a little more numerous than advances at the finish.

In the Chicago grain pit, trading was again checked for most of the day, with prices up the maximum permitted under trading rules of 5 cents for wheat and 4 cents for corn. September wheat, at 86¾ cents a bushel, was up about 19 cents since last Thursday.

Trading Records Broken

The flow of funds in shares and staples, together with the belief that war may make interest rates higher, continued to prompt active selling of prime, low-yield, fixed income securities such as United States Government bonds, in which trading again broke all records in the Stock Exchange.

Turnover of $71,220,000 in the Treasury issues accounted for approximately seven-eighths of the entire bond trading volume in the exchange. Traders again pointed out that this total was not particularly large, compared with the nor-

War Brought Home to District As Food Prices Skyrocket

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer.

The second world war was brought close to home yesterday when thousands of Washington housewives, as well as hotels, restaurants and other wholesale consumers, discovered that food prices are skyrocketing.

Today, which rounds out the first week of armed hostilities in Europe, finds virtually every edible well above the market figure which prevailed when the first shot was fired in Poland.

This was the situation yesterday in Washington:

Retail sugar was up 1¼ to 2 cents a pound, and the demand was so great that the stocks of many grocery stores were exhausted. "Sugar runs" were common throughout the city. Independent grocers made emergency purchases from chain stores in several instances.

Wholesalers were in a near-frenzy because manufacturers and brokers would not quote prices on certain commodities for advance shipment, so unsettled was the market.

Housewives who paid 23 cents a pound for a certain brand of coffee just one week ago grumbled

Westerplatte Suicide Force Beats Off Attack for 6th Day

By George E. Kidd
United Press Staff Writer.

Riga, Latvia, Sept. 6.—When I left the Nazi-held city of Danzig Tuesday morning a small force of Polish soldiers—somewhere between 70 and 200 of them—still was holding out valiantly in Westerplatte fortress after four days of fierce siege.

Machinegun fire from the Polish garrison shattered completely two German efforts to storm the stronghold.

I was told unofficially that the barricaded Poles have large supplies of ammunition, food and water to enable them to hold out for weeks, if they can withstand heavy bombardment by land, sea and air.

The biggest guns of the German naval training ship Schleswig-Holstein in Danzig harbor blasted away at Westerplatte all throug. Friday.

On Saturday 22 German bombers dropped at least 50 bombs on the fortress. The bombardment destroyed a few surface stores of ammunition.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Holland, Mich., Sept. 7.

THE WAR PRESIDENT?

Because the astrologers at the Capital aver Senator Vandenberg's star is in the ascendant and rising to the zenith above the White House, I flew out to Michigan to see how the New Deal's most effective antagonist is spending the summer of his meditation and soul-searching.

Harlan Miller

The Vandenbergs are hiding out at a modest cottage with a big porch a few steps from the edge of Lake Michigan. They have rented it every summer for the last 15 years, probably for about $25 a week.

It is part of a great farm with three miles of lake frontage, in the famed Dutch tulip-and-wooden-shoe colony which surrounds the City of Holland.

* * * *

Here, without telephone or radio, the Senator and his wife are as much alone as a Senator and his wife ever get in these turbulent days. Twice a day he wades far out into the lake, where the water is deep, and swims around. Occasionally he takes a little sun on the sands, or dives through the strong surf.

The rest of the time he cogitates on 1940 and 1941, too wise to picture it as all glory. Even if the war ends before 1941 the next President will wear a hair shirt.

"—a parade for Senator Van"

When he arrived here he was greeted on the lawn of the cottage by a parade of youngsters of the neighborhood, many of Dutch ancestry. It was an army with banners, adorned with such slogans as "My Pop's Gonna Vote for Van" and "Stick With Van and We'll Paste the Democrats."

Some of the letters "n" and "s" are artistically turned around on the signs, which now adorn his living room.

The Senator looks like a President. You can almost see his face on a postage stamp, or on a steel engraving hanging in a seventh grade classroom. Right now he has acquired a deep coat of tan, and he looks healthy and fit in his gray flannel pants and tennis shoes. In the corner of the living room stands a collapsible canvas golf bag, ready for an occasional round of golf on a nearby 9-hole course.

* * * *

The dining table is at one end of the living room. There are five great bowls of flowers scattered around, a small typewriter on a tiny table at the other end, a flag over the fireplace, an assortment of well-worn wicker furniture, a bedroom door opening off one end of the living room, handy for naps, another table and couch covered with newspapers.

Conspicuous on the mantel is a large pair of wooden shoes adorned with "Vandenberg for President," a gift from Delwyn Van Tongeren, son of a local manufacturer of souvenir wooden shoes.

But the Presidential boom hasn't stampeded Vandenberg. He spent half an hour in a spirited defense of Tom Dewey and the New York prosecutor's possible role as a man of destiny. Whether Vandenberg, Dewey, Taft, McNutt or Hull succeeds F. D. R. the task of keeping us out of war will be harder in 1941 than it is now.

Vandenberg talks of a "coalition government" for 1941. Not merely a spiritual coalition, but a coalition with some Democrats in the Cabinet of a Republican President, and at the top of the United States agencies.

For the farmers, he fancies a new version of the McNary-Haugen bill, with domestic allotment.

He thinks relief expenditures could be reduced—but not until resurgent business makes this "an 80-billion-dollar country."

* * * *

Theoretically, this Vandenberg cottage, without phone or radio, is as remote as a cabin on Hudson Bay.

Actually, the Senator keeps his finger on the pulse; he drives the 35 miles into Grand Rapids occasionally, and even flies to Washington at intervals for an incognito visit, perhaps to watch the President's neutrality policy.

Incidentally, Tom Dewey's visit to Owosso, 90 miles away, was something like two boys standing back to back to see which is taller. Around here the impression emerged that Vandenberg tops Dewey by inches.

President Plans Trip to Hyde Park

President Roosevelt yesterday made tentative plans to depart Friday for a week-end visit with his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, at Hyde Park, N. Y. He would return to the Capital Monday morning. Mr. Roosevelt has not seen his mother since her return from Europe a week before the war broke out.

Browder Hails Nazi-Soviet Pact As Aid to U. S.

Nation's No. 1 Red Completes Testimony Before Dies Probers

The Dies Committee to investigate un-American activities, which sometimes used to be accused of being the Nation's No. 1 red-baiter, yesterday brought to a peaceful conclusion its two-day examination of Earl Browder, the Nation's No. 1 red.

And at the end of it all, Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party, walked smilingly from the committee room with the observation that "they treated me much more curteously than I expected—I have no complaints to make."

In the course of six hours of testimony, various members of the committee drew from the witness a vast amount of fact and opinion, ranging from the effects of the Nazi-Soviet pact on the United States to the statement that the American Communist Party contains at least two active clergymen on its rolls, a Baptist and a Holy Roller.

Terms Pact Aid to United States

Browder, whose close-cropped mustache gives him a somewhat Hitleresque appearance, informed the committee that the Russian non-aggression treaty with Germany "greatly improved the situation of the United States in respect to international affairs."

Stanchly defending the treaty against the committee's onslaught, Browder explained that when Hitler made "the very big concession" of signing up with the U. S. S. R., he thereby alienated Japan and Spain, both members of the old anticommunist front. As a result of the Nazi-Soviet past, said Browder, Japanese pressure against the democracies in the Far East will be eased, while "the Fascist threat to South America through Spain" will be similarly diminished.

Direct Threat Broken

"By breaking the axis, the Soviet Union broke the direct threat to America," declared Browder.

The American Communist leader, who was his party's Presidential nominee in 1936, declared that Stalin had made the agreement with Hitler only when it became evident that a satisfactory treaty could not be concluded with the British and French.

"In pursuit of its aim to establish a peace front, the Soviet Union went further than the United States had ever done——it offered a military alliance to the British and French with extensions of guarantees to every country in Europe threatened by aggression," said Browder.

The agreement was blocked, he charged, by refusal of Poland and other Baltic States to accept Soviet military help in case of war, Browder maintained that this stand was taken by Poland with consent of both Chamberlain and Daladier.

Asked if he would support the United States in a war with the U. S. S. R., Browder retorted that such a war was most unlikely, and might arise only "if the Trotzkyists got control in Russia." In that case, he said, "I'd certainly be for the United States."

Might Oppose American War

Browder added he did not believe in the principle of "my country, right or wrong;" and if he thought an American war was wrong, he would oppose it "and probably go to jail."

Asked specifically by Chairman Dies to state the number of Jews in the Communist Party, Browder said there were not more than 2,500 in the entire country, most of whom were in New York City. Dies pointed out that the ratio of Jews in the party thus was no greater than the ratio of Jews to the population of the United States as a whole.

A sharp dispute in the committee arose when Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, read a list of 12 "transmission belt" organizations for transmission of communist ideas including the American League for Peace and Democracy, National Lawyers Guild and American Student Union, which have been addressed by, or received messages from President Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt, or members of the Administration.

Committee Tempers Flare

"I want to show that the New Deal is working hand in glove with the Communist Party," snapped Thomas; whereupon Representative Dempsey (Democrat), New Mexico, asserted that he resented Thomas' "cheap political speech."

"It's no more of a cheap political trick than the Davidson matter brought up yesterday just to smear the Republican Party," roared Thomas. His reference was to a charge by Browder that a man named Davidson, allegedly representing a group of Republicans, had offered the Communist Party $250,000 to nominate Mr. Roosevelt for the Presidency in 1936.

Closely questioned about the connection between the Communist International (Comintern) and the American Communist Party, Browder said that the American party must agree with the decisions of the International, or "party company." He emphasized that the relation is "entirely voluntary."

Viner Arrives Here As Treasury Adviser

By the Associated Press

The Treasury's special corps of war finance advisers was swelled yesterday by the arrival here of Prof. Jacob Viner, of the University of Chicago.

Viner, a frequent monetary consultant for the Treasury, came back from Europe Sunday night with Secretary Morgenthau on the Coast Guard cutter Campbell.

Yesterday, Morgenthau called three bankers to serve the Treasury and said a few economists would come later.

U. S. to Push Nazi Refugee Aid Despite the War in Europe

Taylor, Intergovernmental Committee Chairman, Confers With President; Meeting Scheduled at White House Will Be Held

The Administration sought yesterday to carry on the work—at a standstill due to the outbreak of war—of finding living space in the world for political refugees from Germany.

Secretary of State Hull declared at a press conference that "all phases of the matter are receiving constant attention, with a view to considering every means of going forward with it that may be possible."

Myron C. Taylor, vice chairman of the Intergovernmental Committee for Refugees, made a report to President Roosevelt yesterday as American representative on the committee. He was accompanied to the White House by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

Taylor, formerly chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, later told newspapermen that the meeting of officers of the committee at the White House October 16 and 17 would be held as scheduled.

The conference, Hull commented, is part of the general plan to carry on the work of the committee. Action may be expected, he said, "as developments make possible."

Taylor conferred with Hull before going to the White House.

One problem likely to come before the October conference, it was learned, is the matter of Government aid in financing the establishment of Jewish refugees from Germany in new homelands.

The British government has indicated a willingness to aid the enterprise on a 50-50 basis, with private contributions supplying the other half. The question has been raised as to whether other governments represented on the intergovernmental committee would be willing to join on a similar basis.

The committee has before it the problem of establishing in new homes about 100,000 refugees scattered through England, France, Holland, Belgium and Scandinavian countries.

In addition, there are still about 300,000 Jews in Germany. The committee had persuaded Nazi leaders to give Jews legal status and to permit them to work and earn a living at certain jobs.

In addition, an understanding was reached whereby part of the money which Jews in Germany still possessed was to go into a trust fund to help locate refugees in new homelands. This trust was about to be set up when the crisis developed.

Those familiar with the problem now hope that Germany, in view of the war and particularly the acute labor shortage which was has intensified, will adopt a more lenient attitude toward Jews.

Landis, Shoemaker Threatened in Bridges Hearing

San Francisco, Sept. 6 (AP).—Anonymous threats against Examiner James M. Landis and Thomas B. Shoemaker, Government counsel, were revealed during a recess of the Harry Bridges deportation hearing today.

Landis disclosed he had received a "warning" from unidentified persons "advising" him not to rule Bridges deportable, and threatening to set forest fires in the Pacific Northwest if the ruling was against the West Coast maritime labor leader.

Shoemaker said he had received a post card from Los Angeles containing a threat, evidently because the attorney announced recently his department was investigating possible cancellation of the citizenship of Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American bund.

U. S. Can Stay Out Of War 'If We Want To,' Says Taft

Minneapolis, Sept. 6 (AP).—Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, seeking to follow his father's footsteps to the Presidency, met with Yale alumni this noon and addressed the Anoka Taft for President Club.

"We can stay out of the European war if we want to," he declared. "The World War destroyed democracies and resulted in more dictatorships than ever before."

He said the New Deal's six-year effort to improve conditions has failed.

"Republicans in the last Congress," he said, "have developed a program on which the party can stand. Further extension of Government regulation of everything, on the theory that Government can run a man's business better than he can himself, was at least checked."

Hull Praises Scientists for Co-operation

He Says Statesmen Should Take a Leaf From Scholars' Book

Statesmen could learn much about international co-operation if they would take a leaf from the book of scientists, Secretary of State Hull last night told members of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics.

"Through modern international co-operation science has progressed with strides which would have been impossible if restricted within national and economic borders," he declared in a speech of welcome to 500 delegates from 35 nations. The address was read in the departmental auditorium by Hugh Wilson, former Ambassador to Germany.

"It is my fervent hope, which the people of this country share," he said, "that the day may soon come when the statesmen of the world will solve international politics problems in the same dignified and friendly spirit.

London Scientist Speaks

Science's lesson for statesmanship was stressed in five more addresses at the assembly's opening session, though the two European on the program spoke of the present war with great reserve.

Prof. S. Chapman, of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, London, only speaker from a belligerent nation, referred but once to the "shadows of war." Dr. D. la Cour, of Denmark, president of the international union, deplored "sad evidence of the use of man's knowledge for the destruction of human beings."

It was an American, Dr. Frank B. Jewett, president of the National Academy of Sciences, who expressed fear that the war may bring "horror and devastation beyond imagining."

Dr. Marvin Gives Greeting

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, welcomed delegates in behalf of local institutions of learning. Greeting of the American Geophysical Union were offered by Dr. Richard M. Field, of Princeton University, president.

Although several delegates were called back to their countries at the outbreak of European hostilities, the assembly has pledged itself to as full co-operation as possible throughout the duration of the war. Especially will efforts be made to prevent loss of weather records such as happened during the World War.

Typifying the spirit which the union hopes to keep alive, a Britisher and a German—distinguished scientists, but both young enough for military service—sat down together at the meeting yesterday to put finishing touches on a book which they have been co-authoring for th epast 10 years.

Silver Lining in Weather

They are Dr. Julius Bartels, of the Geophysical Institute of Potsdam, and Dr. Sydney Chapman, of the University of London. Their book will be called "Geomagnetism."

One not-so-sinister angle on how science can be advanced even during warfare was brought to light yesterday by weather experts who said the rolling thunder of artillery in Europe will help to make weather forecasting more accurate.

By noting echoes from the guns and co-ordinating them with the exact time a bombardment starts, observers can learn the exact nature of the clouds and invisible layers of air overhead. Weather conditions in such layers have "pockets and peaks" which cannot be found ordinarily through echo soundings, because it is impossible in peacetime to finance the firing of large masses of explosives.

Hancock Named Member of War Resources Board

Announcement was made yesterday of the appointment of John Hancock, New York banker and former naval officer, as a member of the new War Resources Board.

The appointment increases the board's membership to seven. A six-man board, headed by Edward R. Stettinius, jr., board chairman of the United States Steel Co., was set up last month, as an advisory committee to the Army and Navy Munitions Board, to consider policies dealing with the mobilization of economic resources of the country in the event of an emergency.

As a commander in the Navy, Hancock was responsible for the procurement of all Navy supplies in the World War. He resigned in 1919 and is now a partner of the Lehman Bros. banking firm. Under the NRA he served as chief of staff in charge of plans for organization of industry.

Fight Propaganda, Roosevelt Tells NYA

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Charles W. Taussig, chairman of the National Advisory Committee of the National Youth Administration, was advised by President Roosevelt today to "see to it that the minds and hearts of the youth under your influence are so trained and molded that they will not be misled by false propaganda."

The letter, dated yesterday, advised the committee which is in session here that its duty was to "guide the activities of the youth of the country into ways in conformity with the spirit of our neutrality as a Nation."

European Mail Routes Revised By Postoffice

Channels Will Be More Circuitous and Delay Is Expected

Despite the war, the postoffice still hopes to keep American mail moving into all European countries, but only by a drastic revision of transatlantic channels, it was learned yesterday.

The changes, arranged in the last few days, involves a much heavier dependence on American ships for taking mail abroad and will probably mean use of routes more circuitous than those in peace time, officers indicated. They implied that delays would be inevitable.

The department's present arrangements, it was emphasized, are on a "less-than-24-hour" basis, and will be modified as rapidly as the schedules of American, neutral and belligerent nations' ships are modified, it was said.

Rerounting Around England

The most fundamental shift, it was learned, entails a rerouting of mail around England, up to now the most heavily used distribution center of mail for the Continent.

As announced by department international mail officers, the major provisions of the new plan call for:

Only mail destined for the British Isles, France, Switzerland, Spain and Portugal to be sent to the English and French ports by American vessels. Other ships will be used only if there are any British and French vessels still sailing and making speedier connections—something which now appears unlikely.

Mail for Germany to be sent via Dutch ships docking in the Netherlands.

Mail for Belgium to be sent directly on neutral vessels to Antwerp.

Communications for Italy to be carried by American Export Line vessels or Italian ships.

New Route to Balkans

Mail for Hungary, which previously went through Germany, and for the Balkan countries, to be channeled exclusively via the Mediterranean, mainly by American ships.

Mail for the Scandinavian nations to be carried as before, on Swedish, Danish, Norwegian and American Scantic Line vessels.

Mail for the Baltic nations, Russia and Poland to be routed as if to Scandinavian countries, then transshipped overland to Stockholm, ferried across the Baltic to Helsingors, Finland, and thence carried overland. Previously some mail was delivered directly to Polish and Russian ports by ships plying through the Baltic Sea, or was sent by railroad from channel ports across Germany.

Communications to North Africa, previously sent by fast steamer to Europe and transshipped, to be carried exclusively by the American Export Lines.

Three U. S. Attorneys Resign

The resignations of the United States Attorney and Assistant Attorney in Pittsburgh, and the Assistant Attorney in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, all seeking State elective offices, were accepted yesterday by Attorney General Murphy.

The two Pittsburgh prosecutors are Charles F. Uhl and his subordinate, John D. Ray. The third man affected is Gerald A. Gleeson.

Uhl and Ray submitted their resignations on passage of the Hatch act, forbidding political activity by Federal employes.

The Attorney General said "action in these resignations had been deferred until matters pending in the office of the District Attorney could be satisfactorily disposed of in order that public interest would not be prejudiced. This has now been done."

Naval Reserve Cruises Cut Short by War

South Seas Voyage Canceled to Free Ships For Coastal Patrol

In order to keep officers available for neutrality enforcement, the Navy Department yesterday cut short the training cruise of Naval Reserves and the United States Coast Guard canceled the South Seas Scientific Expedition.

Eleven destroyers of the Atlantic Squadron will be freed for neutrality patrol duty when the training cruises end. The Coast Guard cutter Hamilton, chartered for the expedition, will patrol the West Coast instead.

Orders were issued to ship commanders to put back to port immediately, disembark reserves and take up patrol stations along the Atlantic Coast. The order affected only 11 divisions of reserves scheduled to take their annual summer cruises aboard destroyers, and other units which had previously been directed to train aboard the battleships, Arkansas and Wyoming, for 14 days beginning Saturday, will proceed as directed.

Detail Not Worked Out

While details regarding the patrol duty have not yet been worked out by naval officials, the announcement that the Arkansas and Wyoming would continue their old sailing schedules indicated that the main fighting strength of the Atlantic Squadron might not be utilized on regular patrol work for the time being. The New York and Texas also are attached to the Squadron.

Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnson, Squadron commander, has about two score of vessels available for patrolling the East Coast, a smaller force than was stationed in the Atlantic from 1914 to 1917. While American sea power is now much greater than before the World War, the main body of the fleet was not then concentrated in the Pacific as now.

Besides the four battleships, one of which, the Wyoming, is partially demilitarized, the Atlantic naval forces are composed of the aircraft carrier Ranger, 4 heavy cruisers, 19 destroyers, 14 submarines and ten smaller craft at the Panama Canal. Flagship of the squadron is the New York, now at Annapolis, but normally stationed at Norfolk.

Byrd Trip Cancellation Likely

Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, well known in Washington, is scheduled to relieve Johnson September 30.

Cancellation of the Antarctic Expedition which would take Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and more than 100 men including several Navy officials, to the Antarctic for two years is expected to be announced this week.

The Hamilton was to have sailed from San Francisco September 19 to carry scientists of the National Geographic Society and the University of Virginia to study ocean problems among islands of the South Pacific. Its sister ship, the Duane, is being brought to the East Coast, Government officials said.

A Coast Guard cutter and a ship belonging to the Bureau of Fisheries were to have been taken on the Antarctic trip.

A New Role for 'Our Sweetheart'

Mary Pickford, "sweetheart" of film fans when the screen was silent, was in Washington yesterday on her way to a new role as queen of a tobacco festival. Her usual smile faded with the news that her husband, Buddy Rogers, was threatened with pneumonia at Virginia Beach. She flew to his bedside and when Rogers was reported improving, decided to go through with plans for her coronation as queen of the fifth annual National Tobacco Festival at South Boston, Va., today and tomorrow

Arsenic Slayer From D. C. Guilty Of Two Murders

Philadelphia, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Rafaele Polselli, 57, who came from Washington to surrender in Philadelphia's mass-murder syndicate investigation, was found guilty today of first degree murder in connection with two arsenic slayings which netted $12,800 in insurance.

Polselli, self-confessed "errand boy" of the ring, was the second person to be convicted in the arsenic trials. Herman Petrillo was convicted of first degree murder with a jury's death recommendation several months ago.

Three judges heard witnesses link the Philadelphia syndicate to southern New Jersey and Delaware, then deferred Polselli's sentence while they weighed evidence to decide the penalty.

Polselli pleaded guilty in the deaths of Charles Favato, whose widow he allegedly wished to marry, and Giuseppi di Martino. Favato was insured for $8,400 and di Martino for $4,200.

Reina Mercedes Leaves Annapolis For 'Face-Lifting'

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 6 (A.P.).—The colorful old ship, Reina Mercedes—a veteran of both war and peace—got out of town for the first time in five years today and Annapolis may not recognize her when she returns.

The Reina Mercedes, captured from the Spanish in the Spanish-American War and brought here later to serve as a station ship, was towed by the tug, Keywadin, to Norfolk, Va., for a paint job and repairs. The work will require about a month.

Enlisted men on duty at the Academy have quarters on the ship and some midshipmen found guilty of infractions of Academy rules also are confined there.

The destroyer Leary will double for the Reina Mercedes while the overhaul is under way.

Red Cross Chiefs Decide to Start Bandage Making

Rd Cross chapters throughout the country will immediately be instructed to begin production of hospital supplies to relieve European needs, Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross announced yesterday.

The decision was taken at an extraordinary session of the central committee yesterday. Surgical dressings, bandages, hospital garments, clothes for refugees and war-suffering children are to be made ready for immediate shipment to Europe, Davis said.

Mass production will not be begun by the American Red Cross until full information is received from Europe, according to the announcement.

School Head, 2 Others Die In Va. Crash

Suffolk Shocked, School Opening Delayed by Mishap

By the Associated Press

Suffolk, Va., Sept. 6.—An automobile accident last night took the lives of two leading Suffolk citizens and a Norfolk railroad man, shocking this community and postponing the opening of city schools.

The dead:

John E. Martin, superintendent of Suffolk Public Schools; former president of the Virginia Education Association and past district governor of Virginia Rotarians.

Dr. J. Lewis Rawls, member of the staff of the Lakeview Hospital here and one of the founders of the Tidewater Memorial Hospital.

Martin, 48, headed the V. E. A. in 1935-36 and the Rotary Clubs in 1933-34. He had been superintendent of schools here since 1916 except for the period when he served as an ensign during the World War.

Survivors are Mrs. Virginia Jenkins Martin and John, Jr.

Charles F. Taylor, chairman of the school board, announced that public schools, scheduled to open today, would remain closed. He did not set an opening date.

The trio was enroute to the home of Martin's father, Willis V. Martin, near Hopewell, to take the latter to the hospital. The elder Martin had been seriously ill and Dr. Rawls had accompanied the two brothers to attend the elder man.

The Martin machine, according to accounts here, crashed through the iron railing of the Broad Street Bridge after a sideswipe collision and hurtled 30 feet to the Virginian Railroad track below.

The car landed on its top and a cable was needed to extricate the bodies of the three men from the crushed machine.

Dr. Rawls, 53, a leader in tuberculosis work in the State, was a former president of the Suffolk Rotary Club.

Steele, an aged farmer and neighbor of Harry Rinker, on June 25. Trial of the case has been set for September 26.

The men are charged with beating Steele so severely that he died five hours later. Lloyd and Harry Rinker are brothers and Carson Rinker is their nephew.

Hagerstown Boy, 14, Is Killed by Train

Court Upholds Va. Agents' Act

Richmond, Va., Sept. 6 (A.P.).—A three-judge Federal court today upheld the constitutionality of the Virginia resident insurance agents act of 1938.

The case involved a petition of protesting companies for an injunction to prevent enforcement of the statute requiring that all fire, casualty and surety contracts be signed by an agent licensed in Virginia and that such resident agents receive one-half of the commission paid on any contract negotiated outside the State covering a Virginia risk.

The petitioners sought to show the State had no jurisdiction over contracts executed beyond its borders, but the State, through Attorney General A. P. Staples, argued that the State did have the right to exercise such jurisdiction where risks within the State were involved.

Fairfax Club Tournament

The Lord Fairfax Country Club will sponsor its third annual jousting tournament September 16 on the club grounds just below Alexandria on the Richmond-Washington highway, it was announced by club officials yesterday. The committee includes Dr. J. A. Simms, Frank Fannon, William Coakley, Col. Edwin Emerson, and Arthur C. Stickley, of Arlington.

Bureau Finds Jobs Depend on Size of Clothes

Baltimore, Sept. 6 (A.P.).—Clothes make the man—in the job-hunting business.

D. L. B. Fringer, director of the State employment service, said his staff has had some queer requests, but none more so than the employer who said he wanted a life guard 6 feet 2 inches tall who wore a hat size 7⅞. It turned out the guard had to wear a special helmet bought for his predecessor.

Incidentally, the service found one with the right head size.

Also, Fringer said, men who are sent out to jobs as painters or carpenters are warned to take their white overalls with them.

Right now the service has a request for theater ushers 5 feet 10 inches, 146 pounds, with a 31-inch waist. It seems the theater uniforms are all tailored to fit this size.

The demand for certain workers, he said, now exceeds the supply. The service has offers of jobs for five couples experienced in housework, with salary of $150 per month and maintenance. And as for airplane mechanics and machinists—Fringer says they're nearly worth their weight in duraluminum.

'Awful' Fumes Filled Athenia, Says Survivor

Cooks Badly Burned By Shattered Ranges; Dining Room Flooded

By Doris Kent
Special Cable to The Post

Galway, Ireland, (Thursday), Sept. 7.—Those of us alive today after the terrible explosion on the Athenia had the good luck to be some distance from the port side amidship when the awful shudder and blackout came.

The hundreds feared dead were killed outright by the impact of the torpedo, or were drowned when water rushed in on the lower decks, the first-class staterooms and the galley, the cooks, in the midst of serving dinner, were horribly burned by flying pieces of their shattered ranges and overturned pots of molten fat.

The third-class dining room was inundated immediately. Only fate saved me from death here, since I was transferred from third to first class after boarding the Athenia. I was in the tourist dining room, halfway through dinner, when the explosion occurred. I was partly thrown, partly shoved, between falling chairs and crowded people.

Ran For Life Belt

I got upstairs, and ran down the fume-filled corridor aft to get my life belt on C deck, one flight down, and climbed over collapsed ceiling beams to enter my cabin, which was filled with an awful mouth-drying gas. Up and out on deck again, I found it was still daylight.

I was in one of the first lifeboats to leave. Officers tell me that every lifeboat got off safely, and I saw no capsizing of boats, nor people thrown into the water, although I jumped a four-foot watery gap to enter my boat.

Second Steward MacDonald missed, fell into the water, and was pulled into a lifeboat with a broken leg. The calm and orderliness of the women and children was amazing, and it was the courage of the officers and crew that saved our lives.

I was in the lifeboat for nine hours. We lost the other boats, and saw only the Athenia until we sighted the Knute Nelson in the distance, ablaze with light.

We rowed for our lives, with Hillis Porter, an athletic Australian passenger, bossing the crew members in our boat. We had a seaman, a steward and a bellboy. There was one small boy and the rest were women.

Once we crossed the prow of the rescue ship and were saved from death only by outstretched oars, pushed against the sides. Our most dangerous moment was the rescue itself, when our boat bounced madly against the starboard side of the freighter.

One elderly woman, who had rowed all night, let go of the rope chair in which she was being pulled up the side of the ship. The rescuers grabbed her heels and pulled her up to safety feet first. I was washed into the ocean when my turn came, and was pulled clear just before our lifeboat was bashed against the side of the ship. Had I still been in the water, I might have been crushed.

On board the Knute Nelson, the pluck of Dr. Edward T. Wilkes, whose wife was drowned and whose two sons were missing—one is now safe in Glasgow—eased the pain of the injured.

Mothers Hunt Children

The Nelson's crew hustled blankets, warm clothing and hot gruel, and fed us at two-hour intervals with boiled potatoes, ships biscuits, soup and bread.

Jerry Wynn, a college girl, was taken aboard in a dressing gown, boudoir slippers and coat. One woman was in her bath when the explosion occurred, and wore only an undergarment and blanket. The floor and decks of the Nelson were covered with the rescued passengers trying to sleep.

Mothers peered frantically into staterooms on the Nelson for their lost children, and husbands paged their wives. The injured kept attendants running for bandages. My drenched clothing was hung in the galley to dry, and I took a blanket from the captain's bed to keep warm.

Off Ireland on Tuesday morning, the signal of the Knute Nelson for a pilot was answered by a boat containing four doctors, two priests and supplies of cigarettes and blankets. First the injured were transferred, then the mothers and children, followed by the rest of us, climbed into the tender, where hot coffee and bread were waiting. We left the Nelson with a hearty cheer.

The Galway docks were jammed with people. We were led through the crowd to a huge customs shed, where we given more coffee and bread, then put into buses for hotels which had been assigned to us as we approached shore in the tender.

Galway is a haven of peace for us who remember the awful explosion. The town is having a sheep, pig and cow fair, and I awoke this morning to the bleating of a herd of sheep beneath my hotel window.

Answers are arriving already to the "safe" telegrams sent free of charge yesterday. We are most concerned at the present with reuniting families—mothers with children, husbands with wives, and college girls with the rest of their parties. We have been told that the steamship line is making every effort to move us as soon as possible.

People ask what our plans are. We are so glad to be alive that we do not care.

Survivors "All Right"

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—The 216 Athenia survivors rescued by the American freighter City of Flint are "all right," the ships captain reported tonight.

The 7,500-ton freighter, bound for Halifax, established communication with the Coast Guard cutter Bibb off Newfoundland, it was announced by the U. S. Maritime Commission, which operates the freighter.

Hitler's Old Superior Enlists in Canada

Drumheller, Alberta, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Paul Gurtler, said to have been Adolf Hitler's immediate superior officer during the World War, has enlisted in the Canadian army, it was reported today. Born in the German Sudeten, Gurtler came to Canada after the war and was naturalized.

Pelley Disputes Trade Journal Charge War Would Find Railroads Unprepared

By International News Service

Branches of the railroad industry yesterday seriously disputed the ability of United States railways to handle emergency burdens imposed by the European war.

The railways face an immediate shortage of 2,400 locomotives and 300,000 freight cars to assure a capacity preparedness in event this country should be drawn into the conflict the authoritative industry journal "Railway Age" declared.

President J. J. Pelley, of the Association of American Railroads, announced, in dispute with this contention:

"The railroads can and will keep ahead of any demands that may be made upon them. They can handle at least 25 per cent more traffic than at present, and by repairing 200,000 freight cars and 8,000 locomotives they can handle 45 per cent more than the present business."

The magazine article claimed the railroads "have been and are today virtually a bankrupt industry, whereas they entered the last war in a well-nourished condition. Only with respect to the railroads do our national defense authorities appear to be asleep at the post."

Pelley based his conclusions of railway adequacy "on a careful study made months ago. "Conceding a reduction in equipment, he stressed "a great increase in efficiency of movement," and cited the average speed increase of freight trains of 61 per cent over that in 1920.

eastern Upper Silesia industrial region is in German hands.

"Further north Checiny, Lupussno and Piotrkow have been taken. Both sides of the Siedracz strong bunker line were broken through and the attack on the eastern embankment of the Warta River in the direction of Lodz continued.

"Forces which crossed to the eastern embankment of the Vistula near Kulm and Grudziadz continued in pursuit of the defeated enemy.

"Troops from East Prussia, advancing via Mlawa, took Cichanow. There the hard-pressed opponent is retreating southward. Speed troops reached the Narew River near Rozan.

"Tens of thousands of prisoners and 60 guns have hitherto been taken by German troops fighting in the north. Raids of the German air force yesterday caused a strong disturbance of the enemy's traffic lines and hinterland connections.

"The stations Zdunska-Wola, Skarzysko, Tarnow and Wreschen are burning. Many rail lines have been interrupted. The Polish air force with the exception of individual pursuit planes failed altogether to appear near Lodz.

"On September 5 there were no air raids anywhere on German territory. German naval forces in the Baltic destroyed a third Polish submarine."

Krakow Falls Without Fight

Krakow, the ancient Polish capital, with 242,000 population, perhaps the most beautiful city in the country and the fifth largest, fell without a fight at noon to troops coming from the southwest between the Tatra Mountains and the Silesian industrial region.

The columns, reported advancing without difficulty, are now believed headed toward Lublin, 140 miles in an airplane to the northeast. Poland's government moved there yesterday from Warsaw.

Since Krakow's Wawel Castle Cathedral is the burial place of kings and of the late Marshal Josef Pilsudski, the sentimental value of the city to Poles is immense.

Nazis Honor Pilsudski

Generals commanding the German advance went to Pilsudski's tomb as soon as they entered the city as an honor to the former Polish leader for whom Reichsfuehrer Hitler in the past has expressed his esteem. An honor guard was established in the tomb.

German officials have contended throughout the controversy with Poland that, had Marshal Pilsudski been alive, the present struggle would have not have occurred.

To the north of Krakow and closer to Warsaw, another German army pressed forward to within a few miles of Lodz, while some progress was reported by the troops moving southward from East Prussia toward Warsaw.

Poles Being Encircled

Large parts of the Polish army in Poznan Province, the westernmost portion of Poland, are being encircled by the German drives. Such a movement would render them useless for the defense of Warsaw.

German casualties were officially announced as low—4 dead and 25 wounded to each 10,000 soldiers, a scale of 1-25th of 1 per cent killed and ¼ of 1 per cent wounded.

Behind the lines, life is not yet on a war basis but is being rapidly changed to meet a long struggle if necessary.

It was announced as certain that there would be a normal exchange of goods with the Scandinavian countries, Germany delivering such products as coal which the British no longer are selling.

Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, chief of staff, in his order of the day to the advancing east army, held Hitler up as a soldier's "model of personal courage and stout determination."

He urged the soldiers to "keep after the enemy and apply all your strength until the final decision."

His appeal read:

"Krakow, Bydgoszcz, Grudziadz are in our hands. The Corridor no longer separates East Prussia and Danzig from the German motherland. The enemy is thrown back along the entire front and in retreat. Old tested front fighters of the World War as well as young soldiers share in the successes won in a short time."

Berlin Prepares for Bombs

Berlin, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The German capital, which still has to experience its first air raid, is continuing urgent preparations against enemy bombers.

Workmen stack sandbags and boxes over ground floor windows and gratings on the Wilhelmstrasse. Some shops have the gratings cemented over to guard against gas. Automobiles detour around great piles of sand in the main streets.

In all the apartment houses of Berlin occupants have been put to work sewing and filling sandbags and getting air raid cellars ready.

The nightly blackout has become recognized as a permanent feature of Berlin life. After 9 and 10 p. m. the streets are almost completely deserted. Most cinemas and cafes are only half full.

work, in the position of Commissioner of Customs.

Commander R. S. Field, chief of the Marine Inspection Bureau, joined in the fight on sabotage by ordering all steamship inspectors to "be on the alert for saboteurs and possibly sabotage on all ships leaving American ports."

He said it was possible warring nations might have agents in this country "to hinder supplies to opposing belligerents."

Discussing the fight on spies and saboteurs in this country, Attorney General Murphy said that while it was not intended to conduct a "witch hunt," foreign agents "undertaking espionage, sabotage and subversive activities will not find this country a happy hunting grounds."

He said many new FBI offices have been opened "throughout the land."

Placing the Panama Canal under military control, in a move intended to further safeguard the strategic project from damage, puts Maj. Gen. David L. Stone, commander of the troops on duty there, in charge of both civil and military set-ups. He will have authority above that of the civil governor, Brig. Gen. Clarence C. Ridley.

Secretary of War Woodring said the change was in line with long-prepared plans for protection of the canal in times of crisis.

Howard O. Hunter, deputy WPA commissioner, said the WPA was considering an increase in the number of its national defense projects, such as heavy-duty highways, airports and Army and Navy construction, because of the war.

The aircraft carrier Langley and her 12 planes are to proceed from Hawaii to the Philippines for patrol duty in connection with neutrality requirements. A half-dozen plans, some of them attached to the cruiser Augusta, are also available for that work.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Hull advised Spain that the United States is eager to further the "restoration and maintenance of peace between the nations."

He made the statement in a reply to a memorandum from Gen. Franco on September 4 appealing against spread of the European war.

Hull said that this Government fully shares the conviction that extension of the present conflict is bound to result in untold suffering for the innocent populations of the countries which may become involved as well as for the people of other nations."

Warsaw Digs In For Finish Fight

ress with strong enemy divisions. (Kamiensk is less than 100 miles away.)

"On the north front motorized units of the enemy reached a point near Plonsk."

The Polish communique made no mention of the status of Krakow, nor of Kielce, an important city about 115 miles to the south of Warsaw. Capture of these cities was claimed by the Germans.

Another communique reported heavy fighting in the region of Lodz, Piotrkow and Tomaszow.

These zones are in west and central Poland, some 60 to 80 miles from the German frontier. Tomaszow is on the border of Warsaw province, 65 miles from the Polish capital. Lodz and Piotrkow are near the eastern boundaries of Lodz Province on two main railroads running southwest from Warsaw.

Previous dispatches to Paris on operations on the southern Polish front said the battle line ran from Warta southwest to Kamiensk, towns about 50 miles within the Polish border.

Warsaw's outskirts shook again during the morning under the bombs of German planes. The attack was concentrated on the vicinity of the airport. Considerable damage and some casualties were reported.

Immediately, the Poles began barricading the streets in that vicinity.

One bomb aimed at the railway station struck the administration building, which normally houses some 2,000 employes, but they had been evacuated.

British and French citizens went in droves to the American Embassy, which has taken over British and French interests here. Scores appealed for gasoline, still hopeful of being able to leave tonight.

One train headed for Brzesc this afternoon. Another was scheduled to leave for Lublin tonight, packed with fugitives. It appeared questionable, however, that they could get through to their destinations.

A communique accused German aviators of "aerial brutality in bombing towns, railway stations and columns of fleeing refugees on the highways," and asserted, too, that Polish planes had "bombarded German tank columns" at two points.

Duce's Renewal Of Peace Talk Plan Forecast

May Suggest Armistice Pending Conference, Say Italian Sources

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 6.—Private Italian sources said tonight Premier Mussolini was about to renew his proposal for a conference of powers with a suggestion for an armstice in the German-Polish-British-French war until a conference could take place.

Official confirmation of this report was lacking, but one high-placed Fascist said he thought it "most logical" and that Italy's neutrality was meant to leave Mussolini free to act as mediator if possible.

Private sources made known their belief after Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador to Rome, had held a conference with Foreign Minister Ciano.

Informed sources believed Sir Percy sought some indication of Italy's attitude toward the European war. But what Count Ciano told Sir Percy regarding the possibility of Italy's entry into the struggle or her continued neutrality was not disclosed.

Reports were circulated in Berlin that Hitler planned to return to Berchtesgaden early next week to receive a special envoy from Italy for discussion of a plan to call off the whole war once Germany has disposed of Poland.

It was reported the Vatican and the Italian government were collaborating in an effort to work out a peace plan.

U. S. Believed Informed

The United States is believed to have been informed, as well as Belgium, Holland, Spain, Switzerland and Yugoslavia. All these countries are said to have reacted favorably.

It is reported that a confidential envoy of Il Duce arrived at Castle Gandolfo on Sunday and gave Pope Pius XII personally a verbal message. The envoy returned to Rome a few minutes later, followed by the Pope's private secretary. It likewise was reported that the contacts between Il Duce and the Pope continued yesterday and today.

High Vatican circles report that the Pope is greatly encouraged by what he feels to be a "true, lively desire for peace" on the part of Mussolini.

In foreign circles, however, any new conference plan put forth by Mussolini was expected to run into the British-French objections which wrecked his proposals at the eve of hostilities.

These objections were that Germany must withdraw her armies from Polish soil and break off hostile activities.

Hitler Refused to Withdraw

Adolf Hitler refused to withdraw his troops and the conference proposed for September 5 fell through.

Some Italian quarters thought Hitler might soon be willing to negotiate with Britain and France, since his occupation of a large part of Poland is accomplished, and especially since the corridor, Silesia and Danzig—his chief avowed objectives—are his now.

One Fascist official said he could not believe Britain and France would want to prolong the war "once the Polish question has been definitely settled."

This view, however, did not appear to be shared here in British and French quarters. There the feeling was that the war on Nazi Germany would be pursued to the end.

Italy, while giving no indication that she plans to enter the war at present, nevertheless continued to call up groups of men to the colors.

Hitler Offered British a Pact

Berlin, Sept. 6 (AP).—The foreign office White Book setting forth the origins of the current European war asserted that Adolf Hitler, in an effort to come to an agreement with England, offered a pact whereby Germany would respect the existence of the British Empire and in certain contingencies even support that Empire with German military force.

The document, made public yesterday, stated Hitler in a letter to British Prime Minister Chamberlain on August 28 said he had fought all his life for an understanding with England, which hitherto was impossible because "of the attitude of British diplomacy."

But none would be happier than he if the British attitude changed, Hitler wrote.

A preliminary condition to recognizing, respecting and even aiding the British Empire, Hitler said, was settlement of Danzig and the Polish Corridor issues.

French Soldiers Capture Part of Nazis' First Line

Swiss refugees; all roads and passes were guarded by thousands of green-clad Swiss soldiers.

Immediately north of Basel, where German and French soldiers were heard to shout insults at each other across the Rhine River, there were frantic preparations of war—but not a gun was fired.

German and French alike concentrated on the removal of civilian populations and placed troops in the hastily deserted homes and offices of towns near the stream.

Huningue, a French town just up the river from Basel, with a population of more than 20,000, was deserted except for the military. Farmer-residents of the rich land in the Maginot zone between Basel and Strasbourg, ordered out at once, left behind their livestock, which the army paid for with treasury bonds.

Army trucks rushed the refugees—most of them carrying only bundles—to Mulhouse, whence they took trains to the interior.

On the German side, similar removals took place. Whole villages packed up what could be moved and left for the Black Forest as the reichswehr entered.

Pontoons of all bridges between Basel and Strasbourg were cut as the normally busy river—now virtually without traffic—became a "no-man's-land."

Most residents of Baden appeared convinced the French would not attempt to cross the Rhine and face the withering fire from the Siegfried line. They believe any French drive will be to the north.

Planes Attack in Saar

Paris, Sept. 6 (AP).—The French army swung its northern wing deeper into German territory tonight in the face of increasing Nazi resistance.

A battle developing along the 100-mile front between the Rhine and Moselle Rivers on the extreme northern flank spread slowly across the rough countryside southeast of the Ardennes mountains.

Newly mobilized French reinforcements were moving up toward the frontier behind the line of attacking troops.

French and British planes roared out in co-ordinated attack against the Saar mining area and industrial towns to the north which form one of the main sources of war supplies for German divisions operating in the Moselle valley.

The sixth communique issued by the general staff contained the first mention of German resistance.

Advance on German Soil

All along the front, French advance units were feeling out German field organizations which were supported by automatic arms, the communique said.

It was obvious from the rough terrain that these units, armed with automatic cannon and machine-guns, were directing a cross-fire at valleys and creek crossings along which the French would have to advance.

Despite difficulties of the uneven, forest-covered area through which they were operating against prepared Nazi positions, the general staff said its troops were advancing on German soil.

The evening communique, the second of the day to announce successes on the western front, said the "first elements" of the French offensive wave were "progressing beyond the (German) frontier with the advance variable according to different parts of the front."

"The activity of our aviation," it added, "is in liaison with land actions.

"The movements foreseen for the mobilization, transport and installation of all units continue normally.

"For the various formations, officers, conforming to our traditions, look out as much as possible for the necessities of life for the troops, whose morale is excellent.

"The provisioning of the armies is functioning in the correct manner."

The terms of the communique, especially the reference to "different parts of the front," made it appear that this was the broadest action yet seen on the Western front in the new war.

British troops are arriving in France "to fight beside Frenchmen," it was officially announced tonight by the French military information department.

British warplanes and pilots are also pouring into France, it was stated.

The French advance into Germany's industrial important Saarland, putting increased pressure on the German western wall of fortifications—which at some points are knowns to be many miles deep—in an effort to force the diversion of Nazi military forces from the drive into Poland, had been reported earlier.

The earlier communique said the poilus had made "local advances" on the western front.

Military experts, writing in the Paris press on the basis of today's first communique, warned their readers that military activities on the Western front up to the present represent merely minor operations. It is safe to say that nothing of an ambitious nature has yet been attempted.

Testing Out Enemy

Along the 200-kilometer front that extends from the Rhine to the Moselle, near Luxemburg, the French have been cautiously testing out the enemy, improving certain positions, and eliminating advance machine gun nests of the Germans.

Along the southern part of the frontier the action is confined entirely to intermittent artillery duels. The reason for this is obvious. In this region, no-man's-land consists of the broad and fast flowing Rhine, which is fortified on both sides at close intervals by block houses, Bristling with machine guns.

Although the censorship is very tight, French military writers are allowed to hint that a major offensive is coming soon, which will test out the German boast that their Siegfried Line is invulnerable.

Tonight it was announced no more alarms will be sounded over Paris unless there is imminent danger of the capital being bombed. This announcement was received with relief by the populace, whose slumbers have been disturbed every time a German airplane flew over the frontier.

The first war casualties from the front were reported arriving in Paris tonight.

The wounded were said to have been rushed to the American hospital in suburban Neuilly, requisitioned by the French government and evacuated by its American staff.

The French were in contact with German forces all the way from the commencement of the frontier at Moselle, south of Luxemburg, to the Rhine, more than 100 miles southeast.

British and French planes were reported to have struck at German munitions plants and concentration centers north of the Saar Valley once the backbone of German industrial life.

Reports in Paris said successful raids had been carried out on Aachen (Aix-La-Chappelle), near the Belgian border, and on nearby German war supply centers at Eschweiler and Stolberg.

On Alert for Air Raids

Unamplified reports from Basel, Switzerland, said flames were visible from what Swiss observers believed was an explosion in the great Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen.

The factory is on Lake Constance on the frontier between Switzerland and Germany, 90 miles from the French border.

Advices received here gave no indication as to the reason for the explosion.

Paris and north central France were warned to be on the alert for air raiders twice within 12 hours. Puffs of smoke from antiaircraft batteries and the sound of firing southeast of Paris seemed to indicate enemy aircraft high above the capitol, but no bombs were dropped.

Hit Machine Gun Nests

Advance French units struck first at strongly implanted machine-gun nests in folds of the hills between the Moselle and the Rhine, supported by the slowly gathering force of main line troops from the Maginot line fortifications.

The attack on the northern flank, which would bring the quickest immediate threat to Germany, was of obviously increasing intensity. Heavy artillery bombarded all along the Rhine frontier as far as the Swiss border.

Strasbourg Evacuated

Strasbourg, capital of Alsace, which France won back from Germany in the World War, was reported to have been emptied of its 175,000 civilians before an artillery duel started across the Rhine.

Reports of successful air raids on the German industrial triangle formed by Aachen, Eschweiler and Stolberg came from the Belgian city of Eupen, which is only 10 miles from the frontier.

Reports from Basel, where the French, German and Swiss borders meet, said civilians were being removed from German towns in the area.

Communiques described the German raids over France as scouting expeditions. A 30-minute warning shortly before noon sent Parisians huddling into air-raid shelters for the first time in broad daylight. Previous signals were at night.

Le Havre, one of France's main ports for transatlantic shipping, underwent two raid warnings.

France learned today officially of the application of the United States neutrality law and the embargo on war shipments to belligerents.

Cheered by Other Nations

At the same time the foreign ministry received reports from European countries which they considered cheerful. Italy was indicated to be maintaining a correct neutral attitude. Spain told France she was unqualifiedly neutral. Soviet Russia and Hungary apparently were keeping clear of the conflict.

Dispatches from Rumania said the French and British were cheered by audiences at movie theaters.

French and Yugoslav officials took part together in masses celebrating the birthday of young King Peter of Yugoslavia.

France's first war concentration camp was established at Colombes Olympic Stadium just outside Paris. German nationals caught in France were ordered to report immediately with two days' food supplies, a plate, knife, fork, mattress, blankets and luggage.

British Sink Nazi Motorship In Midatlantic

More Athenia Victims Feared as Yacht Reveals None Aboard

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 6.—Another German merchantman was added today to victims of Britain's warfare at sea, Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, said, as 125 passengers of the British liner Athenia still were officially unaccounted for.

The North German-Lloyd liner motorship Inn which sailed from Belem, Brazil, for Hamburg, August 26, was reported sunk in mid-Atlantic. Details were lacking.

The British admiralty previously announced the sinking of three German merchant ships, but named only the Olinda and the Carl Fritzen, both sunk off the east coast of South America.

The German liner Bremen, whose whereabouts has been a mystery since she sailed from New York last Wednesday, was reported in Berlin to have arrived safely in an unidentified neutral port.

The Inn, of 7,867 gross tons and 295 feet long, carried a crew of 30 and her home port was listed as Bremen. She had accommodations for passengers, but North German-Lloyd officials in Belem said they believed none were aboard.

Churchill told the House of Commons that 125 passengers of the Athenia, sunk off Scotland Sunday night, were unaccounted for.

Affirms Torpedoing

Reports from unofficial sources previously had made it appear that the death total would be only 49 persons. This total was arrived at when the master of the American freighter City of Flint reported to the United States Maritime Commission that he had 216 survivors of the Athenia, including 106 Americans.

The Donaldson line, owners of the liner, reported 506 survivors landed at Galway, Ireland, and 497 at Greenock, Scotland, and that 150 were aboard the Swedish yacht Southern Cross.

The Swedish yacht, however, wirelessed that it had transferred to other vessels the 376 persons it rescued.

"I regret to inform the House that the disaster may prove to be of greater magnitude than was indicated by earlier reports," Churchill said.

He said a submarine torpedoed the liner and that it afterward "came to the surface and fired a shell which exploded on the middle of the deck."

There were 1,418 persons aboard, he added, including 315 crewmen and 1,103 passengers of whom approximately 300 were Americans.

"It is now clearly established," the admiralty head declared "that the disaster was due to an attack without warning by a submarine at 7:45 p. m. on the night of September 3.

Athenia Unarmed

Churchill asserted the torpedo struck the ship near the engine room on the port side when she was 250 miles northwest of Ireland, and added that she was not armed for defense and carried no guns.

Churchill told the House there was no parallel between the sinking of the Athenia and the German vessels Olinda and Carl Fritzen.

The latter, he said, were dealt with in accordance with international law; that every provision was made for the safe removal of the German crews from their ships and their lives saved.

Churchill added he thought there was not the slightest doubt the Athenia left before the declaration of war on a peaceful mission, taking passengers and returning Americans across the Atlantic.

It was clear, he went on, that the submarine must have been in position, waiting for prey.

The Norwegian ship Eindanger arrived at Lisbon, Portugal, with 33 survivors of the Cunard steamer Bosnia, which the Cunard Line said was torpedoed by a submarine yesterday and set ablaze by gunfire before she sank. One crew member was killed.

Neutral shipping virtually was paralyzed in the Baltic because of war conditions.

Eastbound neutral ships sought haven along the Norwegian, Swedish and Danish coasts after receipt of information that Germany had removed a key lightship.

The ships were hugging the coast lines after the sinking of several vessels which struck mines.

The British navy, apparently satisfied that China waters were free of German raiders, lifted a three-day-old ban on ship movements along the Chinese coast.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—War's uncertainties kept shipping of both neutral and combatant nations in turmoil today.

Strict censorship clamped down by British and French governments cloaked plans for the British liner Queen Mary and the French Normandie, tied up at their Hudson River piers, but workmen were observed slapping a coat of gray on the Queen's big funnels and speculation spread that the big ship would risk a camouflaged Atlantic crossing.

Line officials meanwhile kept a watch for the French liner Ile de France, due in New York tomorrow from Havre with more than 1,000 passengers, but with its wireless silenced and exact whereabouts unknown.

The sailing of the President Roosevelt of the United States lines was delayed by war-induced labor difficulties. She was originally scheduled to leave New York at noon.

Demands of the Roosevelt's crew for increased wages and insurance for entering the European war zone caused the delay.

Under Government orders that American citizens must have "imperative reasons" to sail for Europe, five were denied passage on the Roosevelt.

Dr. James H. Ferguson, Brookline, Mass., and Dale W. Maher, second secretary of the American Legation in Budapest, were the only American passengers of 254 aboard when the brightly lighted Roosevelt finally left her pier shortly after 7 p. m. (E. S. T.). Seamen were promised concessions to be allowed by current negotiations with their union.

Newly revised war risk insurance rates, meanwhile, gave preference to United States flag vessels over ships of all other nations. Marine underwriters a week ago tripled rates on all voyages except shipments confined to the Western Hemisphere or on United States ships not touching European ports or the Mediterranean.

Other developments brought:

An announcement that the American cruise ship Iroquois with 240 tourists aboard would steer clear of the British West Indies and instead visit the Virgin Islands.

A report that the Swedish tanker Saint Gobain, bound for France from Peru, sought safety in San Juan, P. R., on orders received after it cleared the Panama Canal.

An order from Washington to steamship inspectors to "be on the alert for saboteurs and possible sabotage on all ships leaving American ports" because belligerent European nations may have agents in this country to "hinder supplies to opposing belligerents."

The American Scantic Line, operating between New York and ports on or near the Baltic Sea, has suspended service indefinitely because of the danger from mines and belligerent warships in Baltic waters.

A staff of 500 United States customs agents, the largest since pre-depression days, was required to handle the influx of American war refugees and tourists returning home.

Nineteen ships carrying 7,200 passengers docked here Tuesday. Five vessels from Europe brought 3,700 persons and 14 ships from northern or southern ports entered with 3,500 more.

The Samaria also brought in $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 in gold bullion, the President Roosevelt $21,000,000.

The Norwegian motor ship Baghdad, operated by the United States Navigation Co., which sailed from here for London August 31 with five passengers and a general cargo, unexpectedly returned to her pier in Brooklyn this morning. No explanation was forthcoming.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 6 (AP).—Great Britain's blockade of German shipping, and the fear of German submarines, continued tonight to restrict activity in this normally bustling port.

Officials of the Prince Line said the steamer Eastern Prince, which arrived today, would not sail Friday for New York as scheduled.

Two French passenger vessels, the Belle Isle and the Florida, were overdue at Pernambuco and unreported, and there was no word from the German Madrid.

There was considerable speculation how the 51,731-ton Brmen could have cruised the Atlantic for a week without being seen. There was even more speculation about what neutral port she could have reached without an announcment of her arrival at that port.

One theory was that the Bremen had headed for Rio de Janeiro. In Boston, the captain of a freighter, who refused to permit use of his name, said he had seen the Bremen steaming south at midnight last Thursday at a point just north of San Salvador in the West Indies.

The Bremen probably would not have had time to reach Rio, however, since Rio is 4,470 miles from New York. Para, Brazil, is only 2,946 miles from New York and Pernambuco is 3,698, only 70 miles more distant than Bremershaven.

If the Bremen had been heading for Vera Cruz, Mexico, she would have arrived several days ago.

Capt. Harry Manning, of the United States liner President Roosevelt, suggested the ship might have sailed for Arctic waters.

All Capitalites Safe in Sinking Of Athenia

McLeod Learns Wife And Daughters Were Taken to Galway

To homes dominated for days by hope and fear, all Washingtonians in the Athenia disaster were reported safe yesterday.

Miss Bainbridge Hayden, of 2820 N street northwest, was believed to have been aboard, but yesterday relatives here received from her in Paris—the one word, "Safe." Although she was reported to have embarked on the Athenia at Glasgow, the relatives surmised that she went ashore before the ship sailed.

Donald McLeod, of 4344 Conduit road northwest, whose family was scattered in the disaster, learned yesterday his wife and daughters, Betty Jean and Dorothy May, were taken to safety in Galway, Eire. His sister-in-law, Mrs. E. L. Barnes, of Washington, said that a cable to that effect was received from someone in Galway who had been looking after the family. Earlier it had been learned that John McLeod, 14, had been rescued.

Jane Sunderland Safe

"All unscratched" was the message cabled by Jane Sunderland from Galway yesterday to her parents, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. A. H. Sunderland, 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest. The "all" was taken to include her traveling companions, one of whom was Hilda Hase, of Fort Monroe, Va. The Sunderlands had earlier received word from the State Department Tuesday evening that their daughter was safe.

Meanwhile, other Washingtonians were either heading across the Atlantic or seeking passage.

John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who was in Paris, according to the latest word received here, is expected to fly back on the Clipper, leaving Portugal on September 10 or 11, his office said.

Blair on Ile de France

David H. Blair, jr., who will be a senior at Princeton University this year, is believed to be on the Ile de France which sailed from Havre Saturday night. His mother, Mrs. David H. Blair, at the Wardman Park Hotel, said that he had reservations on that liner.

Miss Bernice Jansen, sister of a Washington man, Dr. Russell J. Jansen, also was a survivor of the Athenia disaster. Miss Jansen, of Minnesota, a missionary to Japan, was coming to Washington for a visit at the Jansen home, 3320 Seventeenth street northwest. Her relatives here learned through the State Department that she had reached Galway after the disaster.

Capital Teacher Tells of Fear On Nazi 'Pleasure Cruise' Ship

Columbus Passengers Knew Not Where They Were or Destination

"Five days on a German boat—not knowing where we were or where we were going."

Thus a Washington teacher yesterday described her long suspense as the Columbus, of the North German Lloyd line, "zigzaged in the Caribbean Sea after it was taken over by the German government" in the midst of her intended pleasure cruise.

Miss Ella Mabel Ford, who teaches the fifth grade at John Quincy Adams School, returned this week from the cruise, cut short by the war—but not cut short enough to suit her. Toward the end of it, "passengers could not send messages home, the menu cards were restricted, water was limited to one-half glass at each meal—and we didn't know what our final destination would be," she said.

Miss Ford and her friend, Miss Alice May, who teaches at Langley School, left New York on August 19 on what they thought would be a refreshing trip before time for school to open. The ship stopped at the Virgin Islands and Martinique. Then at Barbados came the sudden change in things.

"We went on to Curacao, but we weren't allowed to get off. We stayed there a day and then headed north. But in another day we were back at Curacao. By that time we had lost all idea of where we were going," she said.

"Everyone on the boat was as kind as could be to us. And no one became panicky, but naturally there was unrest in the face of such uncertainty," she added.

"We finally got to Havana on September 1. We saw the Columbus go out from the harbor by flares, and then it disappeared. We got passage on the Florida which brought us to Miami."

7 U. S. Ships to Sail

The State Department announced yesterday that seven American merchant ships will sail by the end of the week to evacuate thousands of American nationals still in European war zones.

London reports stated that many of the 5,000 Americans in the British Isles had balked at the idea of returning home on belligerent ships. Every American and neutral ship bound for this country has been booked solid through the middle of October, it was said.

First of the Amerinan "refugee" ships to sail was the S. S. President Roosevelt, which cleared from New York last night. The Orizaba and the American Seaman, smaller vessels, are expected to sail today or tomorrow and the S. S. Manhattan, now nearing New York, will return to England as soon as possible.

Decision to send ships was made by the State Department when strenuous representations by American Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy took on added significance after yesterday's attempted air raid on England's east coast.

New Capital Of Poland Once A Great City

Lublin, temporary seat of the Polish government while Warsaw is under fire, is an old and war-scarred city once greater than Warsaw itself, the National Geographic Society pointed out yesterday.

Lublin lies about 100 miles southeast of Warsaw almost exactly in the center of Poland. At least nine centuries old, it was once the most important city between the Dnieper and the Vistula rivers. It is the market center for Poland's richest farming area, the Lublin Plateau, according to the society.

The town has now a population of 100,000 but surrounding ruins indicate it was once much larger. Only four gates remain of the walls that defended the city against the raids of Tartars in the thirteenth century and Cossacks in the fifteenth century, the society stated.

Poles Halt Collection Of War Funds in U. S.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—In compliance with President Roosevelt's neutrality proclamation, the Polish consulate today stopped the collection of war funds and refused to accept army volunteers.

Philippines Pledge Loyalty to U. S.

Manila, Sept. 6 (AP).—Loyalty of the Filipino people to the United States in the face of the international situation was pledged in a resolution adopted today by the National Assembly.

The resolution also expressed the commonwealth's "absolute conformity to statements of policy enunciated by President Manuel Quezon" Tuesday. The President had said "it behooves us . . . to assure . . . the United States of our loyalty and devotion."

War Has Raised Clipper Business, Airways Report

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Pan American Airways reported tonight that European hostilities had greatly increased its traffic in all fields.

For July, there was a gain of 31 per cent over the best previous July, and August was far ahead of that, said C. V. Whitney, chairman of the system.

The Yankee Clipper arrived this afternoon with 48 passengers—18 from Portugal and the Azores, and 30 from Bermuda.

Among the passengers were two French army officers, Paul Jaquim and Stephan Thouvenot, who declined to say what their business was in this country.

Kennedy's Frankness Wins British Respect

Ambassador Brings To Diplomacy Precise Mind of a Banker

By William Hillman
International News Service Writer

London, Sept. 6.—The ambassador who can call Prime Minister Chamberlain Neville, and Lord Fairfax Edward, is a diplomatic rarity.

But Joseph Patrick Kennedy is a rarity as a man. He was a legendary man of action before he came to the Court of St. James's. He is creating new legends in London.

He brings to the business of diplomacy the dry, precise mind of a banker and reduces complex international problems to simplest human equations.

He is a trifle sterner and a little more tired than when President Roosevelt named him ambassador. Behind his informality, which never lacks dignity, you discern a sincere and earnest man.

Kennedy has knocked more often on the door of No. 10 Downing street than any other diplomat. His shadow across the threshold of the premier's residence is part of Europe's history today.

He left no doubt in the mind of the world that the United States was interested in what was going on inside. He omitted nothing to indicate that America is concerned about peace; about the various steps involved in the maintenance of peace.

Speaks Mind to Downing Street

But he left no doubt in the minds of the occupant of No. 10 and others responsible for British policy that the United States could not be committed to any policy in advance. He stated bluntly the United States could not be involved or pledged to any course which means definite commitments of armed intervention or support of any kind.

Chamberlain and Halifax know this.

The revelations of the ambassador's frank speech within No. 10 are not mine.

They are contained in the words of one of the three most important members of his majesty's government, uttered in a moment of confidence to a friend.

Yet Kennedy brings to his contacts with the British government such cold-blooded realism and friendly advice that he has won the confidence of the premier and the foreign minister to an extent unparalleled in recent diplomatic annals. Washington has never been more accurately informed concerning British aims and intentions.

Nor has Kennedy misled the British regarding what America could or could not do. There has been no vagueness in his appraisal of American opinion and American probabilities. There have been British statesmen who have justly accused American diplomatic representatives of arousing vague hopes of support and backing. Kennedy is no diplomatic teaser.

Post Most Dangerous in World

The post of American Ambassador to the Court of St. James' is the most dangerous diplomatic post in the world.

For Americans never believe their Ambassador quite escapes going British. Even Kennedy has not escaped suspicion, unjustified as it is, although he is Irish and as furthright an American as ever came out of American political and business life.

He still chews gum, he refuses to wear knee breeches at court, he has sent American debutantes spanking back home to their democratic obligations, with typical American short-cut methods he reaches for a telephone to talk to the premier or foreign minister or other cabinet ministers, he calls everybody that's anybody by their first names.

Yet Kennedy has taken London by storm. Millionaire before 40, bank president, shipbuilder, movie magnate, Wall street operator and tamer of Wall street, New Dealer and business man, he won quick success as ambassador. All the hurdles of British life—crowded in the British capital—political, financial, intellectual and social—were easy for him.

Being an ambassador is to be in many respects a glorified reporter. He must keep Washington informed not only of the actions and views, but intentions of the government to which he is accredited. He must know what the British economic and financial trends are. He must know what His Majesty's opposition is thinking about—in private as well as in public. He must get around. He must be friendly. The oftener he gets around, and the friendlier he is, the more he learns.

Kennedy Gets Around

And Kennedy gets around. The test of his success is that he is as popular with the Labor Party as he is with the Tories.

He carries with him a sense of responsibility not only of carrying out the instructions of the President but of interpreting the spirit of his own people.

Kennedy recently said:

"An Ambassador should go back to his country as frequently as possible. The views of his country alter and change with the trend of events and experience. Only presence back home enables you to measure exactly those changes. An Ambassador living amidst other customs must be on his guard. His judgment can only be trusted if at the time he speaks as a 100 per cent citizen of his own country."

Tonight, Kennedy, after a day of shirt-sleeved efforts at the United States Embassy to get Americans out of Europe's war zone, celebrated his fifty-first birthday at a family party.

Kennedy declared plans for the departure of Mrs. Kennedy and some of their nine children remained indefinite pending further information on available accommodations.

5 Sons to Do Part, Says Lady Astor

London, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Lady Astor's five sons, who were children at the time for the World War, are "going to do their part in the struggle for freedom" the American-born mother declared today.

Three already are in the service—William Walter in the Navy, Michael in the territorials (national guard) and John Jacob in the life guards.

Nazi Troops Push Over Water in Drive on Warsaw

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

German soldiers took to boats to cross this unidentified river (probably the Vistula) in their thrust toward Warsaw, Polish capital. (Photo radioed from Berlin.)

Girl, 14, Is Home Here From Poland

Jeanie Wright, 14, who fled from Warsaw, caught "the last boat from Poland before the German invasion" and played the piano in transit to calm the passengers, yesterday gave relatives her version of the crisis.

At the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Wright, 435 Tenth street northeast, Jeanie told of the overcrowded train which carried her on August 23 to the overcrowded boat at Gdynia. Although at first she had no cabin on the liner Batory, "I kept begging and making a noise until they found a place for me," she said.

She left her sister behind—Mrs. Zdzislaw Klimpel, wife of the former First Secretary at the Polish Embassy here. "My sister was in Warsaw—I don't know where she is now. She was learning to drive an ambulance, so she could help. Her husband was ill in a hospital near Warsaw," Jeanie said.

Hips, Hips, Hooray! Corsets And Bustles Are Back Again

With no forebodings about what war always does to frou-frou styles and besheltered femininity, Washington women yesterday crowded downtown stores buying corsets and dresses with bustles—two of the most utterly feminine "revivals" since the pleated-tunic and slit-skirt days of 1914.

Next year it may be military capes and trench caps again, but this autumn the girls will have their ruffles without drums. The post-war era is going out in a blaze of fire-station red and to the tinkle of costume jewelry heavier than anything Cleopatra ever wore.

Corset manufacturers apparently need not have worried so much over the 1939 woman's reaction to the wasp-waist idea. The "stays" Aunt Agatha wore were simple piles of linen and boning beside the streamline contraptions that sport zippers, boning, lacings, and hooks and eyes. But, if early September buying is an indication, the new way to have a slim middle is going over in Washington.

Buyers are elated and have sent in orders for more of the more extreme models—the narrow midriff-pinch variety designed to bring hips into floradora appearance.

"The younger athletic types will wear those, for they don't have large hips," one of the merchandising experts said yesterday. "The older women will wear the longer models. They really do take 2 inches off the waistline."

Fashion files show that it took two years for the military influence to make itself felt in styles during the World War. The "emancipation" came in with the flapper styles of early post-war days, reaching its peak in the early twenties—when women "threw away girdles and corsets forever."

Won't Join U. S. In War Abroad

Buenos Aires, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Argentina, Brazil and Chile are determined to remain neutral in the European war even if the United States should enter the conflict, it was learned tonight.

The three major South American republics were reported to have agreed that their co-operation with the United States, as evidenced at present by the sphere of neutrality and preservation of continental peace, would cease in case the United States should declare war.

According to a reliable source the agreement was reached at a foreign office conference among Foreign Minister Cantilo and the Brazilian and Chilean ambassadors.

It was expected that Paraguay and Bolivia would join in any declaration to remain aloof from any war outside the Americas. Uruguay today formally proclaimed its neutrality.

Sen. Gillette Pledges Aid To President

Will Back Roosevelt To Maintain National Unity, Iowan Wires

By the Associated Press

Cherokee, Iowa, Sept. 6.—Senator Guy M. Gillettte (Democrat), of Iowa, whose vote to delay action knocked the neutrality law revision program off the Senate's calendar at the last session of Congress, today sent a telegram to President Roosevelt pledging his help to maintain National unity in the current international upheaval.

The telegram:

"Conveying approval and appreciation of your words and actions of leadership in the present international situation. Security lies in a united support behind governmental policy. Individual or partisan views must be subordinated to this national unity. I pledge my help to this end."

The Senator said he had nothing to add to the telegram when asked if he would reverse his stand on neutrality legislation in the event a special session were called. He said he favored unity in support of any national program agreed upon but would make no pledge to any specific measure.

Would Sell to Democracies

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 6 (AP).—Representative Murdock (Democrat), Arizona, told a luncheon club today he saw no reason for the United States entering the European war unless it was "a war to the finish" between dictatorships and democracies."

Declaring refusal to sell the implements of war to France and England would have the effort of aiding Hitler, he added:

"I have about come to the conclusion that the democracies should be sold what they need to enable them to win."

Minton Predicts Special Session

Indianapolis, Sept. 6 (AP).—Senator Sherman Minton, Democratic whip, predicted today a special session of Congress between now and October 1 for revision of American neutrality legislation.

Minton, here on a visit, said he favored amendatory legislation to permit the United States to engage in "cash-and-carry" business with European countries "willing to come here in their own ships, buy from the American market and assume all risks thus devolving."

Vandenberg Emphasizes Neutrality

Detroit, Sept. 6 (AP).—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said here today that "our paramount obligation" in this time of European war "is to the peace and welfare of the United States."

"This is not our war," he emphasized in an address at the Michigan State Fair. "It should not be.

"It is true that we cannot avoid our personal convictions regarding the roots and the objectives of this bloody controversy. But . . . we can avoid unneutral, governmental partisanship, which, upon the one hand, may drag us and the flower of our young manhood into the depths of this carnage; and which, upon the other hand, may render us ineligible to speak effectively to all concerned in behalf of the humanities and for a peace-with-reason at the earliest day."

Barkley Sees 'About Face'

Paducah, Ky., Sept. 6 (AP).—Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley expressed belief tonight many Congressmen who voted against the Administration-sponsored amendments to the neutrality act at the last session would vote differently if a special session were called.

Attributing the "change" to the outbreak of European war, Barkley said in an address to a county Democratic rally that it would be a tragedy "if those who are responsible for plunging Europe into an unholy and ungodly contest should be given any reason to believe there is any division in this country of support of the Government."

mal unreported turnover of Treasuries over the counter, but said selling orders were being diverted to the exchange because it was in that market that the Federal Reserve Bank was placing cushioning orders.

Another reason why much of the trading has been in the stock exchange, some said, was that over-the-counter dealers had been asked by the Federal Reserve to report the names of sellers. The reserve told dealers late today to discontinue the practice.

Treasury Bonds Off

Some of the Treasury bonds again last $10 or so per $1,000 par value. For instance, the 2½ per cents of 1950-52, one of the most heavily traded, closed at $1,010, off $12.81 for the day. At its record high of last June, that bond sold at $1,076.87 per $1,000 bond.

Some bankers said the recent decline had been merely a correction of the abnormally cheap money situation, when the Government issues were yielding only a trifle more than 2 per cent. Now average yields of longer term issues have risen to around 2½ per cent, and in view of huge reservoir of idle funds, some investment men thought the selling might soon be checked.

Businessmen said transactions were still hampered in many lines by the gyrations of prices. Most woolen mills were not yet quoting prices. The leather business was still hampered by disinclination of packers to sell hides. Copper producers sold some metal to regular customers at 12 cents (they had quoted 12½ yesterday) and again withdrew from the market. Lead and zinc prices were jacked up again.

The jam seemed to be breaking in some directions, however. Leading sugar refiners, out of the market since last week, finally offered the staple at 5¾ cents a pound, for prompt delivery only, compared with 4.35 to 4.40 cents late last week. Flour millers were reported supplying immediate demands at prices of $1.50 to $1.80 a barrel higher than a week ago, although they were disinclined to do much business, because of inability to hedge their transactions in the wheat market, with trading blocked when prices moved up the limit.

Raw Sugar At Peak

In the futures markets, raw sugar was again up the limit of ¼ of a cent, but in several other staples, such as silk, cocoa and tin, offerings appeared after maximum advances, and prices receded. Hides and rubber actually fell below yesterday's final prices. Wool finished about ¼ to 1-3 of a cent higher, and cotton futures gained 95 cents to $1.25 a bale.

Livestock prices were boosted abruptly in all principal markets, with hogs at Chicago up $1.50 a hundredweight to $9.40, highest since September 17 of last year.

The Associated Press daily index of 35 basic wholesale staples jumped 2.26 points today to 71.37 per cent of the 1926 average, the highest level since February, 1938. The advance for the past two days amounts to 5.6 percentage points, surpassing anything ever experienced in sensitive commodity markets, at least in modern times.

In the stock market, trading moderated, with a turnover of 3,942,840 shares, about 2,000,000 less than yesterday's. Prices were considerably mixed at the finish. For instance, Allied Chemical was up $5.50 to $188; American Can, up $2.25 at $108.50; American Smelting, off $1.50 at $54; duPont, off $2.25 at $180.75; U. S. Steel, off $2.12 at $64.62; Douglas Aircraft, off $2.75 at $69.25.

In a move designed to concentrate all gold and foreign exchange in one reserve and to conceal the Nation's wealth from "enemy eyes," the Bank of England transferred its gold holdings to the stabilization fund. The move withdrew the gold backing from the bank's gold issue and placed it on a managed basis. The bank also maintained its sterling rate at $4.02 to $4.06 and its gold price at 168 shillings.

Stocks at Amsterdam were irregularly higher, at Paris easier and at Tokyo down on orders from the minister of finance to banks to reduce loans for speculative purposes.

Polish Red Cross Head Seeks Supplies Here for Wounded

Need Is Imperative, Says Gen. Osinski, Who Will Confer With Norman Davis On Ways to Purchase Hospital Equipment

A proud Polish former soldier arrived in Washington yesterday to obtain Red Cross supplies to care for the wounded in what he considers his country's latest fight against partition.

To Gen. Alexander Osinski, president of the Polish Red Cross, the 1939 chapter in Poland's age-old fight for independence can have only one outcome—victory.

"Poland is used to being overrun by barbarian invaders. This time we can stand it . . . We're not fighting alone, now."

With Mme. Anna Paszkowska, vice president of the Polish Junior Red Cross, the general set out for this country August 24, before Hitler's "inevitable" invasion.

"We were only surprised that it came so soon," he explained.

Need Called Imperative

"The Polish Red Cross is young and we need provisions, particularly technical equipment, such as hospital appliances, ambulances and so on. We knew we would need these things and now, of course, the need is doubly imperative."

But Gen. Osinski hastened to point out that he doesn't expect the American Red Cross to foot the bill in caring for Poland's wounded. He came to confer with Norman Davis, president of the American Red Cross, on ways and means of purchasing medical equipment and sending it to Poland. "We didn't come here to beg," he said.

Osinski, who fought through three wars, including the first World War, knows all about the carnage of battle. But he realizes that the present conflict is different from the fighting he saw because civilians stand the same danger as combatants.

Equipment Destroyed

"With the terrific bombing and artillery fire on unprotected civilian populations there is a tremendous need for Red Cross supplies in every town, if our people are to have any protection against this barbarous invasion," he said.

Mme. Paszkowska joined Gen. Osinski in stressing the immediate need for Red Cross supplies. "I am afraid much of our equipment had already been destroyed . . . We need supplies all the more to re-equip our medical units." She said hospitals had been bombed.

Both Gen. Osinski and Mme. Paszkowska expressed regret for not being able to hear at first hand of the conflict in Poland. Reports from abroad may not present the situation exactly because of censorship, they indicated.

When it was pointed out that Nazi legions are reported as having taken Krakow and are hammering at the door of Warsaw, both asserted that Poland nevertheless would emerge victorious.

"We've had bad moments before," Gen. Osinski said. "The trouble is that Germany is prepared to fight the world and just now is concentrating all their strength on Poland. But our fight is for justice and we'll win."

"Yes, and we're accustomed to invasion. We can stand it, this time," Gen. Osinski repeated.

Rule Over Sea Expected Here To Decide War

Military Observers Doubt Allies Can Win With Land Attacks

As Germany's powerful war machine swept back the Polish army on all fronts yesterday, military and naval men here predicted speedy German occupation of most of Poland, with the conflict then settling down into a prolonged maritime war.

Despite reports of French advances into the German Saarland on the western front, experts doubted the ability of the Allies to make any appreciable dent in the Siegfried Line, except by a lengthy, major and costly effort. The result will be a stalemate, it is predicted, with the issue ultimately decided on the sea.

But while the conflict should develop into a naval war, it will be a sea struggle without major battles, observers declare. Germany, with a navy much weaker than her World War sea force, can not challenge the British fleet. Another battle of Jutland is not expected by sea experts.

Blockade Holds Key

The mission of the German navy, they say, will be to raid British commerce and any unprotected frontiers of the Allies' colonies, shutting off as best they can the flow of supplies to England. The British-French fleets, on the other hand, must combat such depredations and effectively blockade the Reich.

Some naval experts believe that German cruisers, as well as submarines, are already roaming the seas, having left their bases before the war got underway. They expect a commerce raider, operating like the Emden during the World War, to be heard from any day. Aircraft, it is felt, will be used in the same way.

The failure of the Polish troops to halt the German legions at any point results from the unwillingness of the Pole high command to commit its armies to a death struggle at the present time, in the opinion of qualified observers here.

Trying to Preserve Army

They hope to keep their war machine intact, even if it means giving up the industrialized western portion of their country and retreating to the less populated eastern provinces, some believe. Poland would then be able later to join in a major attack launched simultaneously by their allies on the western front.

Other militarymen feel the Poles will make a major stand to defend Warsaw, as the loss of their capital will undoubtedly lower Polish morale. The armies are falling back toward a new defensive ling along the Vistula River. There, if the early fall rains come, the rising river and a "sea of mud" might assist them greatly. Even if driven into eastern Poland, where paved roads are few, the weather and terrain should prevent Hitler's troops from "mopping up," it is said.

Roosevelt Asks No Censorship, Early Asserts

FCC Chairman Says He Has Discused Neutrality of Radio

White House Secretary Early yesterday assured reporters of his conviction that the President wants no censorship of standard broadcasting stations or of the press as a whole.

Later, after an all-day meeting of the Federal Communications Commission, James Lawrence Fly, commission chairman, admitted that there had been lengthy discussion about radio neutrality and broadcasts "in the public interest" while Europe was at war. He denied that any new regulations governing "propaganda" broadcasts had been drafted.

He announced that the commission had appointed a committee of commission members including himself, Commander T. A. M. Craven and Thad H. Brown, to study the problem.

Reminds Peace Is Still Here

Early's statement was in reply to a question about the President's warning the day before lest the United States find itself the clearinghouse of propaganda and information work of agents of the belligerent nations.

Plans exist for the control of communications should this country go to war, Early admitted, but reminded that this was a time of peace for the United States.

He said the Government was keeping a close tab on the radio to see how the young industry met the problems of American neutrality in a time of great international stress. The press, he said, has gone through periods of war and neutrality, but the radio is a "rookie rather than a veteran."

Child Is Watched

"There is a general feeling," Early said, "that radio, because of its youth, is coming into a time in history that is new to it. If we find that the child has been reared so it is well-mannered it will be left to run its own business. If it proves to be a bad child there will be a disposition to teach it some manners. Certainly there have been no moves in this direction yet."

A declaration by Early that the shortwave and international broadcast fields should be carefully watched was borne out by FCC experts who said that the problem of apprehending small radio sets broadcasting information about ship or merchandise movements, for example, would present serious difficulties. Extensive monitoring of the ether waves, they indicated, would be necessary.

Fly emphasized the fact that the FCC's problem at this time was two-fold, the first being to prevent broadcasts unneutral in the sense that they were conducted in behalf of a belligerent and supplied military or war-connected information.

The second problem, he said, was one which was now being carefully studied and which had not yet resulted in decisions. It involved the commission's power to determine what was in the "public interest, convenience and necessity" in statements made in broadcasts.

Westerplatte's Tiny Garrison Still Holds Off Germans

bombardment and storm the place they were repulsed by Polish machinegun fire that seemed to come from many points of the small peninsula on which Westerplatte fortress is situated.

The Germans didn't know exactly where the Poles were hiding, with the result that the Nazis were caught in Polish cross-fire several times.

50 Nazis Reported Killed

It was reported that 50 Germans were killed in the first unsuccessful attack on the fortress, which has become Poland's "Alcazar," reminiscent of the siege of the Toledo fortress in the early days of the Spanish civil war.

German official bulletins thus far have avoided mention of the seige of Westerplatte.

It is believed that the Poles have spread a modern network of underground defenses, modeled after France's Maginot line.

The Polish soldiers inside the fortress, knowing they are "suicide troops" destined eventually to be wiped out unless they surrender, seem in no mood to give up even though death appears certain.

Germans Clear Harbor

(The Germans, fearing the depot eventually would be blown up by its defenders, cleared the harbor area, rehousing thousands, the Associated Press reported. They were unable to locate the Poles amid the wreckage and scarred stumps of the depot, but the guns blazed on their approach.

(Meanwhile, the Germans were displaying vexation at the slowness of their efforts to take the nearby Polish port of Gdynia. On my departure from there they were being held several kilometers distant from the city.)

War Isolates Danzig

By the Associated Press

Riga, Latvia, Sept. 6.—Danzig, Europe's exploded powder barrel now war-bound in the hands of the German army, today finds herself in deeper isolation from Germany than before her annexation was announced last Friday.

Artillery fire echoes through the city, troops roll through on lorries, and Danzigers are sealed up completely by the German army and Gestapo (secret police).

Free travel to and from the former Free City is prohibited.

Batle for Postoffice

There was a 12-hour pitched battle in Danzig streets Friday for the Polish postoffice before the attacking forces finally set fire to the building. Some 20 Poles were reported burned to death and 40 captured.

Many Danzigers also lost their lives during the bitter hours following announcement of their reunion with Germany. Many were wounded.

Marian Chodacki, Polish commissioner to Danzig, was reported still in the city under protective arrest.

Leaving Almost Impossible

Foreigners must obtain permission of the Gestapo to leave the city. Getting funds to do so is a virtual impossibility since banks have almost ceased handling foreign exchange.

Export and import business has come to a halt. Nazi soldiers are in possession of all Polish business houses and banks.

Numerous Polish prisoners have been marched through the streets of the Baltic port.

Strict rationing of all necessities is being enforced.

Danzing was not bombarded, but the nearby resort of Zoppot was. Germans reported a few lives lost there.

Third of Nation Taken

Berlin, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Today's military communiques of the war in the east, if accurate, indicated the German army has seized one-third of all Poland and is master of the nation's richest provinces.

It appeared certain that German forces advancing from East Prussia already had made contact with the main Polish armies on the Narew River, 40 miles northeast of Warsaw.

With nearly all of Poland west of Warsaw evidently under German control or soon to be, neutral military observers here agreed that if the Polish army is going to make a stand the time is nearing when a decisive battle must be fought.

The apparent speed of German advances and relatively few reports of heavy fighting left little room for doubt that Polish forces had withdrawn from much of the territory through which the German soldiers were passing. Competent observers were of the opinion that a Polish retreat from the whole western province of Posen must have begun already.

The Lunts Return to Their Footlight Chores

In New York Preparing for Capital Opening; Glen Echo Park Drops Curtain Sunday Night; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

CONTRARY TO the recently implied uncertainties in the theater, there seems to be be no longer anything tentative about the announced opening of the National's new season of 1939-1940 on Monday, October 2.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne arrive in New York today from their May to September vacation at their summer home at Genesee Depot, Wis. They will spend the day at the Theater Guild—according to the latest bulletin from that sturdy organization's Joseph Heidt—auditioning actors for several parts in their acting version of Shakespeare's comedy of "The Taming of the Shrew." Tomorrow they will leave for a brief trip to Vermont, returning to Broadway on Monday to begin rehearsals in the play that is to open Washington's slightly retarded season of living drama.

BELL

After opening its abbreviated road tour at the National on October 2, "The Taming of the Shrew" will open the University of Wisconsin's new theater on October 9, completing the week in Milwaukee; play St. Louis the week of the 16th, doubling back to Baltimore to regale the Theater Guild subscribers the week of October 23. Beyond that, nothing definite has been planned for the production that created such a considerable furore upon the occasion of its first presentation in New York.

It is well to bear in mind that the Lunts' "Taming of the Shrew" represents no ordinary treatment of the famous old Elizabethan farce. It has been devised in such a way that action spreads to both sides of the footlights, with acrobats, livestock and all manner of unique embellishments adding to the novelty and zest of a play that never has been static, even in its least inspired performances.

As Mr. Lunt described the "Shrew" to local critics who had not seen his elaboration of it when he and Miss Fontanne were here last winter in "The Sea Gull," it must be quite a number!

Since its first matinee performance is this afternoon at 2:45, it isn't amiss—I hope—to abjure all of the faithful who can't get there any other time to hustle out to the Olney Theater and see Mary Brian and her supporting cast in "Thieves Fall Out," the new mystery-comedy being primed for Broadway. This, I think, you will find to be a pretty funny business with a few shrieks mixed in with the audience laughter, as is the proper thing with any chills-and-fever farce. There were a few ear-splitting screams on Tuesday night that emanated from sources that were not above suspicion, but there also were many that sprang from susceptible throats made vocal by the eerie enterprises going on behind the footlights. I would not be sure that "Thieves Fall Out" is another "The Bat" or "The Cat and the Canary," but it is more or less cut from the same bolt and is easily the best "theater" the Olney has put on this summer.

And about that summer thing. We have suspected for some time how that it must be abou over. Now we are sure of it. Our certainty is made practically complete by the announcement from Major Domo Leonard B. Schloss, of Glen Echo Park, that he is shutting down "Washington's Miniature World's Fair" for the year on next Sunday night, September 10. If not Glen Echo's banner season, the one just closing at least belongs in the upper brackets among the amusement resort's best. There is a reason for this. It lies principally in the sagacity of Mr. Schloss, perhaps the country's foremost impresario of summer park amusement.

Leonard Schloss is a stickler for decorum at all times and in all departments of his amusement center, including the one the public usually considers its own. Rowdyism in any of its manifestations is not tolerated at Glen Echo. The 50-odd amusement devices operated in the park are dedicated to wholesome entertainment that may be enjoyed equally by all members of any family. That is one reason Glen Echo Park is such a popular recreation and outing place for church, social, civic, patriotic, athletic and other organizations that like to enjoy unsullied good times. Nobody is responsible for all this but Len Schloss, the one park manager in the country who has demonstrated that keen showmanship can be combined with a high sense of public responsibility and made to pay handsome dividends.

On Sunday night Glen Echo will be closing its twenty-ninth successful season. I hope, for the benefit of all concerned, that Len will be out there running things for the next 29.

The intinerary mapped out for Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox, here tomorrow to appear in person at the world premiere of "Nurse Edith Cavell," is a busy one, extending from 12:35 p. m., the hour of arrival of star and her producer, through the screening scheduled for 9:40 p. m. By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 6.

MRS. FREDERICK WATRISS: Your daughter, Brenda Frazier, last week received another film offer to appear in the Andy Hardy series. The producers want to use a debutante and night club setting. . . . Brenda, incidentally, was worried for fear that her grandfather was aboard the torpedoed Athenia. . . . Joe Louis: Maxie Rosenbloom, asked whether he'd fight you, answered: "Don't be silly. Louis could knock me out over the telephone."

DUKE OF WINDSOR: President Roosevelt was very much pleased, when he read a report that you and your wife may settle near his Hyde Park estate. . . . "That would be great," said the President, "because then I could run him against Ham Fish for Congress."

PAUL V. McNUTT: The Book of Instructions for enumerators who took the special census for two Indiana counties recently emphasized that in canvassing jails they must make a careful distinction between the warden and the prisoners. . . . Errol Flynn: The British Consul in Los Angeles has heard that you won't respond to the call to arms—because they won't let you use your bow-and-arrow. . . . W. C. Fields: Orson Welles wants to star you in a film version of "Pickwick." . . . Magazine Guild: that "Vermouth Cassis" caption for Peter Arno's cartoon in last week's New Yorker was written by E. B. White. That, and the one the week before, were the only times such changes have been made in the last five years.

MAE WEST: Negotiations now are being made for Tony Galento to appear in the movie you're making with W. C. Fields. . . . Galento, incidentally, really saw "They Shall Have Music" before he indorsed this Heifetz picture. He commented "It's wonderful." . . . "You mean the picture s wonderful?" Tony was asked. "No,' he confessed, "I mean its wonderful that I'm getting $200 to see a movie."

SPENCER TRACY: Darryl Zanuck fired Mike Romanoff for failing to attend the premiere of your picture, "Stanley and Livingstone." Mike had told Zanuck: "I didn't go, because nobody invited me." Zanuck replied: "Nobody invites you to draw that $75 pay check every week. You're through." . . . Sam Goldwyn: David Niven is glad that you withdrew him from "Raffles," because he's a British reserve officer who must respond to the call. "Goldwyn," Niven explained, "is batty, if he believes that I'd spend my last 30 days, before going to war, working in a movie." . . . Will Hays: Alva Johnston now is in Hollywood, where he was assured by J. P. McEvoy: "Anything you hear is true; anything you make up is true."

TWA. for the past ten years William Fox has been using planes in traveling across America. He always tells his wife, however, that he travels by train, and arranges for telegrams to be sent to Mrs. Fox from each train depot en route . . . The masquerade, however, now is over. Last week, when Fox started to pack, his valet brought a light case. "Mrs. Fox," the valet explained, "says this is better for flying."

JACK WARNER: Mrs. Pat O'Brien is complaining now, because in all the pictures you assign to him he never winds up with the girl. "If Pat doesnt win the girl in the next one," said Mrs. O'Brien, "the public will think that I won him in a punch-board game." . . . Harry Hopkins: Dr. Alex Dye, former director of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in your department, and now commercial attache in London, has been entertaining all American visitors in the embassy by donning the gas mask the British gave him . . . Dean Landis: The Harry Bridges Defense Fund is depleted now, and Bridges is trying to raise more money. . . . In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 6.—You won't fall in love with "The Women" but you'll be terribly amused by them. Roz Russell does a grand job. Mary Boland steals every scene she's in. Norma Shearer had to share many of her emotional scenes with little Virginia Weidler. Joan Crawford never compromised for a minute — a hussy throughout—and she played it to the hilt. I'll hand it to Joan, when she does give, she gives her all. And lives up to what is expected of a glamor girl. An hour after other stars had disappeared, she was still down there signing autographs. Marjorie Main, Lucille Watson, Joan Fontaine and Paulette Goddard were all excellent. It's a riot of laughs, men guffawed louder than women.

HOPPER

Understand Herbert Marshall had to be responsible for Edna Best and her three children, in order to get her back into the country, even though it's reported she is going to marry another man as soon as a divorce can be arranged.

What tall tales Miss Blumberg, daughter of president of Universal Pictures, will have to tell her pals now that she's returned East. She and a pal played extra on the set of "Rio" for three days much to their delight. And also two Guild members who had to be employed to sit on the sidelines for them.

The Actors' Guild would have liked Jimmy Roosevelt to have taken an active part in their negotiations, but he smilingly said: "Sorry, boys, I've problems of my own."

There was fun on the "Green Hell" set when George Sanders had to give John Howard a haircut. As you know, hair can make or break an actor. So to have fun, from the barber shop they had gathered a lot of cuttings, and piled them on the floor around Howard's feet without his noticing them. After snipping through six takes, Howard looked on the floor, put his hands to his head, and fled to his mirror.

Before Brian Aherne played a doctor in "Vigil in the Night" he had to watch an operation. And had a terrific time to keep from fainting.

Star-rong Lamour nearly went in one to the opening of "The Women" but at the last minute Bob Ritchie talked her out of it.

Two New Films On D. C. Bills For Next Week

Holdovers and Summer Attractions Augment Amusement Roster

"DUST BE MY DESTINY." John Garfield and Priscilla Lane, whose previous appearances together were in pictures with tragic endings, play the central roles in this new Earle feature, which boasts a happy denouement. Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan, Charley Grapewin, Henry Armetta, Stanley Ridges, Moroni Olsen and John Litel have other leading roles. "Laugh Parade," the stage revue, will feature Ray Mayer and Edith Evans, "The Cowboy and the Girl;" Sid Gordon, "violinuttist;" Ruth and Billy Ambrose, dancers; the Great Neiss Troupe, trapeze performers, and the Earle Roxyettes. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"BLACKMAIL." Edward G. Robinson stars in this melodrama, appearing as a character more sinned against than sinning. He is an oil well shooter, whom a ruthless criminal forces to confess to a crime he did not commit. Ruth Hussey, Gene Lockhart, John Wray, Esther Dale and Guinn Williams are in the cast. "Fall Follies" is the Capitol's stage presentation, headlined by Johnnie Barnes, the local tap dancer. Joe Besser, comedian; Sara Ann McCabe, songstress; Rita and Rubins, dancers; Tieber's Seals and the return of the Rhythm Rockets to the Capitol stage are other features of the bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"IN NAME ONLY." Carole Lombard, Cary Grant and Kay Francis continue in this domestic drama at the Fifteenth street film house. The story concerns a grasping wife and a selfless young woman and their struggle for one man. Peggy Ann Garner, Washington starlet, has the role of the young woman's daughter. Tomorrow night only, the run of "In Name Only" will be interrupted for the world premiere of "Nurse Edith Cavell," with Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox present in person.

Palace

"THE WIZARD OF OZ." The Technicolor film version of L. Frank Baum's childhood classic, continues on the Palace screen with Judy Garland, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Margaret Hamilton, Billie Burke and Frank Morgan in the leading roles. Short subjects and the latest news events complete the bill.

Metropolitan

"THE OLD MAID." Bettie Davis and Miriam Hopkins return to the downtown sector after two weeks at the Earle. George Brent plays the man these two cousins struggle over. Events make the one a wealthy, selfish woman and the other an unloved, old maid aunt, who loses the love of her own child. Jane Bryan, Donald Crisp and Celia Loftus have supporting roles. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"FOUR FEATHERS." Alexander Korda's expertly photographed Technicolor film of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, returns to F street after an engagement at the Palace. Ralph Richardson, John Clements, C. Aubrey Smith, June Duprez and Donald Gray head the cost. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"STOLEN LIFE." Elisabeth Bergner continues through a second week in her dual role of twin sisters, one of whom attempts to become the other on that one's death, in order to remain with her brother-in-law, whom she has long loved silently. Michael Redgrave is the man and Wilfred Lawson plays a leading role in the British-made film.

Olney

"BURLESQUE." Clifton Webb and Libby Holman open next Monday evening at the country playhouse in this backstage story, originally presented by Arthur Hopkins. The Olney resident company will support the stars, who have been playing the roles in many summer theaters. Mary Brian concludes her engagement in "Thieves Fall Out" this Saturday evening.

Trans-Lux

"PETRA." The city in the Arabian desert is the setting for the new "World Window" travel series, featured short subject at the newsreel theater. "Know Your History" depicts the history of the bicycle and the steam engine; "Bow String" concerns archery and "Mickey's Trailer" is the new cartoon. Opens tomorrow morning.

Atlas

SMILEY BURNETTE, the cowboy film star whose songs and comedy are numbered among filmland's great box office attractions, will appear in person next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday as the stage attraction of the theater at 1331 H street northeast. His Hollywood cowboy partners will appear with him.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 6 (INS).—Prepare now for an avalanche of war pictures. Believing that the people are more interested now in the big conflict overseas than in any other subject, practically every studio is getting ready to film a drama dealing with some phase of warfare. Samuel Goldwyn today assigned Jo Swerling to write "Blackout Over Europe," a nonpartisan dealing with a group of unfortunates caught in a spectacular air raid.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The ingenuity of James Basevi, who created the amazing storm scenes in "Hurricane" and the terrifying earthquake in "San Francisco," has been called upon by Sam to devise this latest destruction. You can depend upon it. M. Basevi will make war even worse than Sherman's description, for he is a master at achieving horrifying and realistic effects.

Late today Edward Small had all but closed a deal for the purchase of Erika Mann's "School for Barbarians." There has been considerable bidding for this poetry, which deals with the Hitler regime. She is the daughter of Thomas Mann, famous author and lecturer, who was much entertained in Hollywood when he appeared here last year after he and his family left Germany with other refugees. Small denied the current report that owing to the war difficulties he would cease production operations. He said he had certain commitments with United Artists and would fulfill all his obligations. I doubt if Small or any of the independent producers will make as expensive productions as they planned, but the movies will probably not suffer from economy.

Herbert Marshall had a reunion at the Beverly Hills Hotel today with his little daughter, Sara, whom he hasn't seen for a long time. She arrived with her mother, Edna Best, and her nurse after a hurried and none too comfortable trip from England. Miss Best's twin boys remained in New York with friends, while she and little Sara were escorted to California by Nat Wolff who went East to meet her. She considers herself very lucky to have left England before war was declared and therefore to have escaped the usual war scares. Miss Best will go into "Swiss Family Robinson" as soon as it is ready.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Maureen O'Sullivan has booked passage on the Atlantic Clipper leaving Ireland September 13; the Lou Breslows have adopted a 3-month-old baby and are calling the new member of the household Lawrence; Deanna Durbin relieved to hear that her parents have arrived in New York and will be home Sunday; Joy Hodges and her bridegroom, Gilbert Doorly, flew in today on the first lap of their honeymoon; Ellen Drew, heat notwithstanding, has been sporting a new fur coat; Eleanor Powell will celebrate both Thanksgiving and her birthday November 23.

Sylvia Sidney Adler's baby is expected this month. Her mother, now in Hollywood, leaves in time to be with her actress-daughter; Gregory Ratoff is back from a three-week rest cure at Santa Barbara; Ann Sheridan and Jean Negulesco a new and different twosome; Spencer Tracy plays tennis on the Westside tennis court each day with a full set of whiskers; Cesar Romero's current femme interest is Evelyn Atchison, Earl Carroll beauty; Reginald Owen has hied himself to the mountains to write a story; Sam Goldwyn was asked today if it were true he had wired Hitler to shoot around David Niven because he needs his star for "Raffles."

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Gayety

ZORITA, the clever dancer, whose "Dance of Death with a live snake has made her a local favorite, headlines the next week's burlesque presentation, opening Sunday afternoon. Comedian Harry Connelly will support the star.

Open-Air

"I AM THE LAW." Edward G. Robinson is the star of the new bill opening tonight at the drive-in auto theater on the Richmond Highway. Sharing top honors are three recent releases of the "March of Time:" "The Maginot Line," "The Mediterranean Defenses," and "In Nazi Germany." Continues through Saturday midnight.

Glen Echo

THE AMUSEMENT PARK will close for the season this Sunday evening. Cecil Golly's orchestra will wind up the dancing festivities in the Spanish ballroom on Saturday night.

Roadside

"THE DRUNKARD." This is the next to closing week of the season for the barn theater on the Rockville Pike and its revival of the old melodrama enlists the services of Ralph Fowler, Lansing Hall, Eugene Kressin and Betty Gray at the piano.

Glen Echo Players

John Paul Earnest, who taught law in Washington for 50 years and was called "Daddy Earnest," by his thousands of proteges, left an estate of $950 in cash and a library of law books, his will disclosed in the District Court yesterday.

To his son-in-law, George Baille Springston, Mr. Earnest left the library. He bequeathed the estate to his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Earnest.

Mr. Earnest died June 23, a month after National University students presented him a trophy commemorating his half century of teaching there. He also was a George Washington University professor emeritus.

The Drive Into Poland

The German Juggernaut, moving irresistibly into Poland, has in six days rolled back the defending forces on four separate fronts.

Two German armies, one moving out of East Prussia, the other out of Pomerania, have succeeded in effectively cutting the Corridor and provisionally reuniting the parts of Germany severed by the Treaty of Versailles. These armies are now advancing on Warsaw from the northwest and north.

Further south, a third German army has been pushing steadily toward the great Polish industrial center of Lodz. A fourth army, operating from Slovakia, has overrun the Silesian coal fields and yesterday occupied Krakow, Poland's ancient capital and still one of its most important cities.

Thus far there has been little effective resistance to the Nazi steamroller. Sadly deficient in artillery and air power, the Polish forces are everywhere in definite though orderly retreat. They are not merely handicapped by a decided inferiority in materiel. The present area of combat has no natural obstacles capable of hindering or halting Germany's mechanized divisions. Most of the present fighting area is one vast plain.

The outlook for the Poles is thus decidedly grim. Already the German forces are battering at the gates of Warsaw, which has been evacuated by the government. The fall of the capital, if accomplished in the first week of war, would be a terrible blow to Poland. This outcome would also tend to consolidate the home front in the Third Reich where, if persistent rumors have any truth, the war is far from popular.

Yet Warsaw is not the vital heart of Poland in the way that Paris is the nerve center of France or London of England. Pushed back to the east, the Polish armies would still be in a position to continue the war for some time in the great triangle made by the Vistula and Bug Rivers. There, during recent years, new industrial centers have been built up capable of supplying the fighting forces, after a fashion at least. And before long now Poland's invisible allies, Generals Mud and Frost, may intervene to give that harassed nation something of a respite.

In view of the strong defensive position Germany obtained through the construction of the West Wall, prospects of an Anglo-French offensive capable of relieving the pressure on Poland do not appear too favorable. So that war-born and war-torn country may continue to bear the brunt of the German attack alone. Its government, however, counted the cost of this in advance, and still decided that resistance was preferable to a surrender in which more than territory would have been lost.

No Bonanza

American farmers who are inclined to look for a bonanza in the European war will probably be keenly disappointed. The unusual demand for American farm crops which developed soon after the beginning of the World War in 1914 carries no assurance whatever that similar marketing opportunities will arise from the present conflict. On the contrary, there are numerous indications that few unusual demands for foodstuffs will be made, at least in the early stages of the war.

Large reserves of wheat, for example, are reported to have been accumulated by the belligerents in anticipation of the calamity that has now come upon them. The importation of wheat was already generally under control by these countries. So it appears probable that no rush to acquire large quantities of this staple can be anticipated. And purchases are likely to be directed to countries with favorable exchange rates.

If the war continues for several years, of course, the outlook may change. But that is entirely problematical. Farmers who adjust their acreages in the hope of finding a "war market" for large quantities of wheat and other commodities will simply be gambling on a future that no one can foresee.

Secretary Wallace has done well, therefore, to advise farmers to proceed with their production plans as if the outbreak of war in Europe had not occurred. Those who are inclined to believe that the war will bring them a great opportunity should remember the collapse of prices following the last great conflict and the painful steps that have since been essential to restore our overextended agricultural plant to something approaching a normal condition.

Mr. Wallace believes that, with the aid of his new agriculture advisory council, the AAA will be able to avoid the overexpansion of agriculture during this war. He also thinks it will be possible "to cushion the shocks of the readjustment which will be inevitable if the present conflict continues over any lengthy period and on any large scale." The machinery of the AAA seems better adapted to that purpose than to the regulation of farm output in peace time.

Collapse At Geneva

According to the schedule of the League of Nations, this week should witness inauguration of the busiest season of the year for the organization which was designed to make impossible what is now actually happening. The Council of the League was supposed to convene at Geneva tomorrow, with the annual assembly of all member states following next week.

Apparently neither organ is going to be called into session. On the contrary, the permanent staff at Geneva has been informed by Secretary General Avenol that it must be greatly reduced, even beyond the sharp curtailments which have been made for reasons of economy during the past year. As a neutrality measure, moreover, the Swiss government has banned any broadcasts of a political nature by the League radio station.

Under the circumstances it seems desirable that the organization should be reduced to a skeletonized office force for the duration of the present war. Any political activity now would stamp it as an agency of one side or the other. The future of the League, and Mr. Avenol says he is sure it will be born anew as the result of this war, depends on the machinery being kept intact for purposes of reconstruction, and for those purposes alone.

The Japanese aggression against China weakened the League; the Italian invasion of Ethiopia reduced it to impotence. The German attack on Poland eliminates the last shadow of its authority as an agency competent to avert war. It is ironical that as this comes about a Gallup poll indicates that a majority of Americans would favor this country joining "a movement to establish an international police force to maintain world peace." For this is further than the League of Nations, which we would not join, was ever disposed to go.

There was a time when some Americans argued that membership in the League of Nations might get the United States into war. That argument is heard no longer, yet the risk of our involvement has not been noticeably decreased by its disappearance.

If wars of conquest are to be ended there must, soon or late, be an association of nations strong enough and determined enough to put an end to international anarchy of the sort which has run riot in recent years. President Roosevelt hinted as much in his radio address on Sunday night and the moral is further pointed by the present collapse at Geneva.

It is not because the League of Nations was too strong that it is today of no moment in the world tragedy. It was deficiency and not excess of power that wrote its doom.

Heavy Responsibility

The European conflict is only a few days old. But it has already been made painfully clear that this war even more than the last will be no respecter of human values. On the contrary, it will destroy everything that gets in its path.

Foreseeing this tragic fact, men across the ocean have for months been frantically seeking to store prized possessions in as safe places as possible. Despite such precautions, many of the world's finest works of art and architecture will probably be offered on the altar of men's barbarism, along with the unwritten books, the unspoken plays, and the wasted talent.

Accordingly, a statement made recently by Leslie Cheek, jr., new director of the Baltimore Museum of Art, deserves particular attention. "It is plain," he said, "that one of the first duties of America should be to preserve its culture as well as its peace, so that Europe will have something to turn to when this conflict is over."

Not only is this admonition sound, but it comes at an especially timely moment. Under the impact of the outbreak of hostilities, American discussion has largely centered around the question whether this Nation will sooner or later be involved. While this is surely a vital topic, it has, perhaps, overshadowed the possibilities of constructive action we can undertake while much of the rest of the world is engaged in destructive combat.

Obviously our duty involves building while so much is being destroyed, and saving when there is so much waste. Although it is not our war, as far as fighting is concerned, we, together with other neutrals, have the solemn responsibility to preserve the civilization common to us all. For when men ultimately lay down their arms they will look for a new and better existence than that of living by the sword. They will again seek pleasures which, before the carnage, made life more enjoyable. Whether or not these things will be available will, in no small measure, depend on us.

Impulsive Markets

A rise in the prices of certain commodities and industrial stocks, following the outbreak of war in Europe, was foreordained. The fact that the outcome was discounted in advance, coupled with a background of improving domestic business, provided a basis for this week's sensational spurt in the stock market. The speculative upswing in commodity prices is attributable in good part to buying by domestic business as a protection against expected later advances. In commodities as well as stocks, however, precautionary purchasing may have overestimated the effect of actual later buying by the countries at war.

What the situation will be when buying for war purposes gets well under way depends upon many factors whose effect upon the course of domestic prices and industrial profits cannot be gauged at this time. While some of our industries will be able to profit from an overseas war, others will find their business curtailed.

Heavy buying of essential war materials by belligerents has as a corollary reduced purchasing of nonessential or less essential commodities. The orders just issued by Great Britain, subjecting a long list of goods to import licenses, will curtail shipments of certain classes of our manufactured goods. The extension of French import licensing to cover all categories of goods will likewise cut our export trade to that country.

Blockades, on the one hand, and sinkings of merchant vessels on the other, may also result in forced reduction of exports. Our neutrality legislation, moreover, introduces further uncertainty into the picture.

The extent and the character of wartime buying will be determined both by the length of the war and by the way in which it is conducted. And at this juncture predictions as to the duration and nature of the conflict are extremely hazardous. In case of prolonged warfare, the demand of belligerents for essential foodstuffs and raw materials would become more and more pressing as reserve stores disappear and the productive capacity of the depleted civilian populations declines. In case of a short war, we might find the drain upon our surplus of commodities, needed for the conduct of war, much less than anticipated. Much depends upon the extent of the preliminary provision made by countries now at war and also upon their ability to finance purchases.

Furthermore, assuming heavily increased buying of certain commodities, it is quite possible that efforts to prevent profiteering here in the United States, as well as resistance to price advances elsewhere, would disappoint speculative expectations of booms in commodities and stock prices. Even if unexpectedly large profits should accrue to American producers of war materials, it is certain that in the long run this Nation will be worse off for the war.

War profits for some inevitably spell loss for others. And they also result in economic shifts and dislocations necessitating difficult and costly readjustments when peace returns.

A Strain On Credulity

It is a pity that Chairman Dies of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities did not permit Comrade Earl Browder to explain at length why he is "quite happy" over the conclusion of the Nazi-Soviet pact. For it would be extremely interesting to know by what devious processes of reasoning Mr. Browder would attempt to reconcile this statement with his assertion that the great objective of Communist parties everywhere is to battle Nazi-Fascist ideas.

To the discerning layman the nonaggression pact between Russia and Germany appears to call attention to the fundamental likenesses of the social and economic structures of the authoritarian regimes set up in both countries. The mere fact that the Russian dictatorship is called communistic, while the German dictatorship is referred to as fascistic, is of minor consequence.

Mr. Browder's assurance that the Communist Party in the United States is opposed to force and is 100 per cent for democratic institutions as the "only means" of establishing a sound economy puts an impossibly heavy strain upon the credulity of anyone with average intelligence. The "intellectual appeal" of communism as thus defined certainly cannot be reconciled with approval of the practices of the Communist leaders who direct the policies of the Russian government.

One is inclined to suspect, therefore, that Mr. Browder's professions of happiness over the Russian-German rapprochement are merely those of a party hack who knows it would be worth his job to deviate one jot or tittle from the line laid down by his master in the Kremlin.

A New York preacher was shocked at the scant amount of clothing worn by girls in the fair's Aquacade. Of course, it takes very little to shock some persons.

A large number of people can't think, and those who can think don't know what to think.

Reactions To The War

Newspaper's Facts

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Upon the good or bad judgment of publishers and editors and directors of the boards of the American press and their press associations rests a solemn responsibility. Through the use of one of the greatest and most potential mediums for the dissemination of propagandas they alone can decide the question of whether or not American people are to be plunged into another great and horrible war.

Publishers and editors and directors of these newspaper enterprises have now the opportunity to prove that they are above the reproach of an awakened but not too strong public by ignoring unconfirmed atrocity stories of French, German or English origin and give to the reading public only the true facts of happenings abroad. They can go a step further to safeguard the neutrality of our country. They can place its national interests above special interests of any foreign state. Or they can pave the way for the sacrifice of millions of men. Which shall it be?

Neutrality Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

May I congratulate you on your splendid editorial in The Post of September 2 entitled "Is Neutrality Possible?" The present struggle merely crystallizes the barbaric and alien mode of thought of the Nazi ideology which, by virtue of American apathy and neutrality, has been fostered and will be abetted.

He who declares such a struggle is not of our concern or he who states that an ocean is a barrier to our at least sympathetic participation is either willfully ignorant or stupid or believes that such a stand will be advantageous from the point of view of political self-aggrandizement.

Can an ocean be a barrier to human thoughts and sympathies? Are we, ostrich like, to bury our heads in the sand and await the destruction of democratic principles throughout the civilized world? Apart from the inhumanness of such indolence, when are we to realize that each further extension of such modes of thought, such modes of existence, inevitably, inexorably have their repercussion over here?

Nothing breeds success like success: the pseudo-victories so far obtained cannot fail to appeal to the more superficially minded of us. Are we to await the day of Armageddon, when we are the last bulwark of democracy, surrounded on all our frontiers by a psychology, by a form of existence alien and inimical to every act of our daily existence, hostile to every American tradition?

At present we have an obvious and simple recourse: Let the President reconvene Congress and let them repeal the present neutrality laws.

ADOLPH ROSTENBERG, JR.

Washington, Sept. 2.

German View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The present crisis shows the cynical injustice which separated one part of Germany from another by foreign territory. If Germany had been treated as a nation with human rights instead of being spurned with contempt by the Allies and Poland alike, perhaps the present crisis could have been averted.

American eyes should be centered not on Danzig or Berlin or London, but squarely on Washington—to forestall promptly any attempt to enlist American resources on the side of the Allies. Poland's desire to perpetuate her wedge between the two parts of Germany is not worth the life of one American. Certainly not mine!

FRANK BRIGGS.

Washington, Sept. 2.

For Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

This morning millions of Americans are in churches, homes or on the roadways, praying—some verbally, some silently—for peace in Europe.

We are taught by the Founder of our faith to pray "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us." Can that prayer mean but one thing? Are we only making a fetish of prayer, or do we hold in our hearts the spirit of Him who prayed: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do"? I am thinking of our so-called "enemies"—the German people. Are we to cull from the teachings of the Nazarene only what we in our unrighteousness choose to accept, or are we to believe He meant, "But I say unto you, pray for your enemies"?

Germany, in its military power is heeding the command of its deluded dictator. Cannot America, in a Nation-wide "hook-up" merge its spiritual power in a prayer for peace—but in accordance with the teaching of the Master whom we profess to follow?

Telepathic Message

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your readers might be interested in a telepathic message which I have just received from Der Fuehrer. "Greetings, my good 'American friends. And by the way my new friend, Joe, also sends you his best regards and thanks you most heartily for the help you have rendered him, and also for that which you have promised in the future. He even goes so far as to assure you that he holds no ill will against you for having supplied munitions to Japan to kill Russian soldiers.

"Now to the gist of my message. My great love for you prompts me to give you some advice on how to conduct yourself during World War II, which has apparently begun. I want you to be neutral in thought and in deed. On many occasions I have expressed my admiration for you.

"If you will stay out of this war I will, at its close, make a ten-year non-aggression pact with you and will agree to respect your territorial integrity provided I am allowed a free hand in restoring order to the south of you. I have no intention of turning my war machine on you nor of allowing Joe to use his to your detriment. I renounce all claims to Germans in the U. S. A. and will not start any 'back-to-the-Reich' movement.

"I will not cram bolshevism nor fascism down your throats nor force you to obey any orders from Wilhelmstrasse. The only thing of a political nature I will demand is that when you see the swastika or the hammer and sickle or my picture or Joe's you shout lustily and in that good German way Sieg Heil!

"Now, do not get excited and say this is preposterous; think what you will get in return and I am sure your intelligence (and I always considered you a very bright people) is such that you can see the point; greasers will not be allowed to seize any more of your oil wells; no more strikes in U. S. A.; the Japanese will not be allowed to kill your sailors and missionaries, strip your daughters nor slap your mothers.

"I will see you in Pennsylvaniastrasse if you will just be nice little ostriches and continue to keep your heads in the sand. Der Fuehrer."

Urges Fairness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

This is written only in the spirit of fairness and in the hope that the public mind is still in a mood to consider several simple but pertinent facts in the background of the unhappy controversy between Germany and Poland.

It is unfortunate that the person and the methods of Hitler have prejudiced the cause of Germany and obscured in the public mind whatever merit there is in the claim of Germany for the return of Danzig and the Polish Corridor or for a restudy of the question. It is hoped that they may yet be studied in the calm spirit of fairness aside from the passions and the unfortunate circumstances that have been occasioned.

1. Point thirteen of the fourteen points, agreed to by all the allies as a basis of peace, reads as follows: "An independent Polish state should be erected which should include the territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations, which should be assured a free and secure access to the sea, and whose political and economic independence and territorial integrity should be guaranteed by international covenant."

2. William Harbutt Dawson, in a book entitled "Problems of the Peace," written in 1917, and thereafter used as one of a series of university texts in diplomacy, advised against the plan of a corridor and the detaching of Danzig in words that seem strangely prophetic.

3. At the peace conference, David Lloyd George, the British member of the "Big Four," protested the taking of Danzig from Germany; and its final status as a free city under the League of Nations was the result of a compromise. Germany was not represented at the peace conference.

4. Marshal Foch, generalissimo of the allied armies, said that the Polish Corridor contained the roots of the next war. His words also proved prophetic.

"Fair Warning"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

For nearly a quarter of a century the World Peace Association, now co-operating with more than 300 national and international organizations operating in 56 different countries, has ardently advocated the establishment of democratic world government.

This would have an international congress as its highest legislative body, whose members should be elected by the people on a proportional, moral and intellectual basis with supreme authority to set up world courts, to create an international police, a naval and air patrol and to deal with all international questions.

This is mankind's only hope for permanent world peace. Under present world conditions the so-called leaders in every nation are their own policemen, judges, juries and executioners. Under such conditions can only come war after war.

Let us common people, now better organized than ever before, serve fair warning on the saber-rattling war mongers of all lands that if we are forced into another World War against our will, we shall drive the last one of them off the face of the earth or into it. CARL A. RYAN,

Secretary-treasurer, World Peace Association.

Repatriation

SANDBAGS, more sandbags . . . buses and tramcars eerily illuminated with blue lights . . . crowds in Parliament Square . . . treasures from the museums being loaded onto lorries and drawn away by placid, heavy-hooved draft horses . . . defense programs on all radios . . . defense posters on all streets . . . defense announcements in all newspapers . . . subdued excitement, not much noise. This was the London that Ambassador Kennedy on August 24 advised us to get out of as quickly as we could.

That night in Waterloo Station a round-faced little Englishman of middle age, with bowler hat, umbrella and newspaper at which he pointed repeatedly, sat down beside us. In a low hushed voice he spoke of his job at the American Express. Americans demanded passage on the Washington, he said. There was no room. He booked some from Cobh and told them to cross to Ireland and get the boat from there. "It's terrible," he said. "I don't care, I don't care for myself. I'm old. It's the young people I care about." He rushed off to the boat train where he was seeing a friend off. We saw him again later, clutching his umbrella in one hand, his paper in the other. He asked us if we were all right.

His talk annoyed us. It seemed a transgressed-against British composure. It took so much for granted. When it came to leave-takings we liked to tell people who wished they were going with us that we expected to see them soon again. For instance, the athletic woman with "the tennis arm" whose husband died in the last war and whose only son is now 21.

There wasn't much comfort or satisfaction in escaping from photographers' flashlights to the darkened train compartment. Although, like most of those who were sailing with us, we had been booked months in advance, we had a feeling of running away from something we should have remained to face. Riding through the darkened country had a soothing effect upon these qualms. So did the loud voices of conductors, luggage insurance men, passport inspectors. "Is this a school teachers' convention?" one of them asked. "The train is full of them. Americans must be well educated."

Outside Southampton the whole thing lost much of its grimness. We were more pleased than not by the news that the Washington had been delayed at Le Havre and we would have to wait for it. We were told not to be alarmed when the lights went out. A black-out was in order. We weren't alarmed at all.

We couldn't believe in war, now. For seven days we had talked ourselves into optimism. The boy with a fellowship at Heidelberg said that Germany was calm and Hitler too smart to allow a war. The school-teacher from Detroit said that English newspapers could be bought at any German newsstand, that foreign radio schedules were easily secured. The story about the woman tourist, who was followed and searched all over Germany until she finally heard a feminine shriek in the next train compartment followed by dead silence and no explanations, was told with variations and pretty generally discredited. Said we had seen it in a movie back home.

There was a curious contradiction of logic in our being certain there was no danger. All the while we knew that several hundred unexpected passengers on our boat had forced part of the crew to sleep on cots in the gymnasium, were necessitating use of emergency rations. We knew, too, that our ship and crew expected to be ordered back immediately for more Americans, instead of setting out on the Bermuda cruise, after the customary five-day layover in New York.

We sat about the deck reading a book suppressed in Hungary at the beginning of the last crisis which cites Germany's own figures to show that she could never win a war. There weren't many who would admit they expected war. Yet we spoke with anxiety about the German-born steward who was unable to bring his wife and baby to the United States because his final American citizenship papers are not yet signed, and who fears that these two will be mistreated because he will not be fighting for the fatherland.

Thursday morning, there were more photographers to greet us when we landed. We learned that the crew's conjectures had been right, the Bermuda cruise had been canceled. As we left the boat we saw furniture being unloaded from the lounges to make space for cots for passengers on the next westbound crossing.

Back in Washington 24 hours later we heard the newsboys crying the war extras. Turning on the radio we heard the sound of young voices raised in song. It came, we were told, from Waterloo Station where a trainload of schoolchildren from the Lambeth District was being shipped from London to the relative safety of the countryside.

Facts Presented

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your front page editorial September 2 reeks with propaganda similar to that common some twenty years ago. I am not one to favor Germany, but as to your depicting Poland as a democracy who would not be imperialistic I disagree, for it was the same Poland with the same dictator that was clamoring with Germany for a portion of Czecho-Slovakia just last September.

Despite your inferences against neutrality, the true American will devote his efforts to forwarding the cultural, industrial and scientific enterprises at home and to keeping clear of the mass murder and self destruction in other localities. In all though, I believe that your paper gives an excellent portrayal of the news.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Kuhn, A Paradox

THE BEST anti-Nazi propagandist in the United States is neither Jew nor Englishman but a more or less naturalized Aryan German intimate of Adolf Hitler himself. His name is Fritz Kuhn, he is fuehrer of the German-American Bund, and he has been fought no less angrily by leaders of the Steuben Society of America than by the B'nai B'rith, the Czechs, the British and the Poles.

Two years ago Theodore H. Hoffman, national chairman of the Steuben Society, denounced Kuhn as an interloper who would presume to tell the members what they might think, where they must buy, what they might read, for whom they must vote and what color of clothes they must wear.

Mr. Hoffman concluded by demanding, "Who anointed this Fritz with the sacred castor oil of divine dominion?"

Kuhn Speaks Only For Small Minority

ABOUT THE SAME time a prominent member of the society wrote:

"We in the Steuben Society have always been up against a stone wall when it came to a question of getting suitable publicity in the English press of New York. On the other hand, the Nazis have never failed to get front-page publicity. This type of co-operation has hurt the cause of those Americans of German extraction who are seeking to stamp out naziism and keep hatred, prejudice and intolerance from our shores.

"Unfortunately, our Jewish co-citizens have been letting their hatred of the German government be visited on German-American businessmen. This is not common practice among Jewish employers and other Jewish people, but it is, nevertheless, evidenced in many business organizations and places of employment."

Mr. Kuhn, it should be emphasized in the interests of internal composure and tolerance, is a humiliation and a plague to the decent, patriotic American of German birth or extraction. He has been repudiated by experts, and he speaks only for himself and a small, ignorant alien minority and for his own Fuehrer. The purpose of his bund is revealed in quotations from Nazi official documents proclaiming that all persons of German blood "belong to Hitler's state, no matter to which state they may have sworn allegiance." That includes many native and naturalized Americans who fiercely resent the aspersion.

Kuhn Embarrasses Loyal U. S. Germans

THESE QUOTATIONS, published in book form under the title "The German Reich and Americans of German Origin," under the sponsorship of Nicholas Murray Butler, Samuel Seabury, Henry L. Stimson, Mgr. Ryan and others, expose the purpose of Fuehrer Kuhn. One says: "We reject the concept of a cosmopolitan German whose chief ambition is to assimilate with the people of the country in which he lives." Another says: "In addition to the official German Legation, there are now established local groups of the Nazi party foreign organizations in 60 countries of the world."

Another, taken from an official speech by E. W. Bohle, fuehrer of the Nazi department for the fomentation of treason in foreign countries, officially known as the foreign organization of the party, says: "The main accusation against the foreign organization and party comrades abroad is that we are causing unrest in the German colonies and destroying their unity. If fight means unrest, then we admit we created unrest."

There are many other gems, but these suffice to prove the mission and attachment of Kuhn's bund and to indicate the embarrassment suffered by many local Americans by reason of Kuhn's speeches and the failure of their fellow Americans to discriminate between those who follow and those who loathe him. That embarrassment and the injustice of it will increase unless the press does learn to give appropriate coverage to acts of repudiation and the people, especially the Jew, to learn to distinguish the seditious bundsman from the legitimate American.

Biggest Single Force Against Hitlerism

KUHN PROMISES to "throw out of office" the President of the United States, a threat which, uttered against Hitler in Germany by no matter whom, would qualify the speaker for an appointment at the chopping block. Some Americans, particularly some of German birth or blood, might wish to lock him up, beat him up or heave him out. But, on second thought, every time he opens his mouth he aggravates the decent hatred of everything he represents.

He is, by paradox, the greatest single force against Hitlerism now operating among us. If he is dangerous at all it is only because his insolence might goad this country into active participation in the war against the loathsomeness of which he is a worthy spokesman.

Army and Florida Give Navy Land For Aviation Base

The War Department yesterday announced the transfer of the Florida State National Guard reservation near Jacksonville, to the Navy as a site for an air base.

Ownership of the 938 acre tract was vested partly in the Army and partly in the State, and the Duval County Air Base Authority is paying the latter $400,000 for its share, it was stated. A new National Guard training area of 25,000 acres in the Kingsley Lake area will be procured.

Funds for starting construction of a naval air base at Jacksonville were voted by the last Congress, as part of expansion of naval aviation facilities.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

True Nature Of War Lies Beyond Early Polish Campaign

THE TRUE CHARACTER of the war cannot become clear in these preliminary military operations. Thus it has always been evident that the Polish army could not withstand the attack of the best troops of the German army, that it would be pushed back, would lose ground, and suffer heavy losses. Nobody has ever supposed that Poland would defend her frontiers against invasion; the only questions have been how long the Poles could maintain a resistance somewhere, how much they could make the Germans pay for their victories and how much of the German army they could engage in the occupation of Polish territory. Whether Poland is to survive will depend on the final result of the war, not on the outcome of the first battles of the campaign.

It has been no less evident at all times that the British and France could not give immediate and effective direct assistance to the Poles, and that their struggle with Germany would not be decided by battles but by the ordeal of exhaustion. When, sooner or later, the preliminary Polish campaign ends, the real nature of the struggle will be disclosed.

Neutrals' Influence Will Prolong War

IT WILL BE a struggle in which the great neutrals—Russia, Italy, Japan and the United States—are almost certain to exercise an influence which will make the war a very long war, and as far as one can see ahead an indecisive war. Once the Polish barrier between Germany and Russia is down, the Russians will be able to supply the German arsenals, including those taken from the Czechs and Poles, with raw materials.

American neutrality is so arranged now that we shall supply the Allies with the raw materials for their arsenals but not with weapons. What Italian neutrality will mean has yet to be disclosed. But it may be surmised that the Italians will begin to threaten France, once the Germans are able to come to their assistance, having overcome Poland and organized the necessary supplies from Russia.

How long will Jugoslavia, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria be able to maintain an effective neutrality after the Germans and Russians have achieved a working arrangement? As for Japan, it must still be assumed that her neutrality in respect to Great Britain is tentative.

Outlook's Gravity Can't Be Disguised

THERE IS NO disguising how serious is the outlook, how probable it is that the war will be as long as it is bitter, as desperate as it is indecisive. Of the four great neutrals, three, namely, Italy, Japan and Russia, have been in one form or another allies of Nazi Germany. Whatever may be the sentiments of the mass of the people, there is in each of these so-called neutrals a dominant party of bold men who have staked their own personal careers on the ultimate victory of Hitler and on the destruction of the power of the British and French democracies. For the moment they are waiting to see.

But their neutrality, unlike our own, is not pacifist and innocent. It is calculated with a view to achieving on the first favorable occasion the maximum gains at the least risk.

Each of these three neutrals is ruled by men who are committed to a revolutionary change in the constitution of the old world, the Japanese to a so-called new order in China and the Western Pacific, the Russian Communists and German National Socialists to a new order in Europe and Africa and nearer Asia, the prevailing faction of Italian fascists to a participation in the distribution of the spoils.

Uncertainty Delays Aid To Germany

WHAT KEEPS these neutrals neutral is not, as it is with us, a sentiment of isolation and a horror of war, but uncertainty as to whether Hitler's army is able to deal with the maritime and military power of Great Britain and France. They will go, we must assume, to the assistance of Hitler if he seems to be winning, or they will remain neutral if the Allies seem destined to win.

They will watch us particularly, and the character of our neutrality will have a profound influence on the character of their neutrality. This fact has already been revealed in the case of Japan, when the abrogation of the commercial treaty and the threat of an embargo made Japan turn toward neutrality even before the Stalin-Hitler pact was signed. There is every reason for supposing that Italy, which is so vulnerable to sea power, will be profoundly influenced by the American position. An American neutrality which weakens the British and French will almost certainly encourage the Italians to practice a neutrality which ends in intervention if ever the British and French are sufficiently weakened. And Stalin will certainly help a victorious Germany much more than a failing Germany.

These, it seems to me, are the great realities of the struggle rather than the battles in Poland or the incidents of the war at sea and in the air.

ing but that anti-aircraft guns mistook returning English planes and fired at them.

The German planes, on a reconnaissance flight, were said to have been turned back before they reached England. The ministry statement said this accounted for rumors of a heavy aerial engagement.

Defenses Not Penetrated

The government announced that the attempted German air raid on the east coast had been driven off and that "so far as is known" the Germans "did not penetrate our defenses at any point."

Meanwhile, all units of the regular army, territorial army and militia were merged into a single unified army to facilitate smooth operations.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to make his first statement on the war situation at tomorrow's meeting of Parliament.

Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George, 44-year-old son of Great Britain's World War premier, David Lloyd George, tonight entered the government as parliamentary secretary of the board of trade.

The younger Lloyd George, an independent Liberal member of Parliament, returns to the post he held when he and other Liberal members resigned from the national government in 1931.

Other new appointments included that of Capt. Austin U. M. Morgan, former parliamentary secretary of the ministry of transport, as civil lord of the admiralty.

The government apologized to the Danish government for what was described as a "most unfortunate accident in which damage was caused to lives and property by a bomb or bombs which may have been dropped from a British airplane over Esbjerg" Monday.

London explained that a plane fighting German craft during a raid on the Kiel Canal might have become disabled and dumped its bombs on land instead of in the sea. It said it had been established that none of the British planes which returned from the raid had dropped the bombs on the Danish port, but added laconically that not all the planes had returned.

The treasury announced that in addition to credits recently granted Poland by the British and French governments an agreement had been reached whereby the two governments would give Poland a cash loan of about £8,500,000 (approximately $34,000,000).

More Leaflets Dropped

The House of Commons passed a bill making the government the sole importer of all essential foodstuffs and providing for price fixing. The government's aim was said to be to insure that ample food supplies would be available at proper prices.

King George, wearing the uniform of marshal of the Royal Air Force, visited the secret headquarters of the A. A. F. fighting command and later sent a message to Prime Minister Chamberlain expressing hope that his work would be carried on "in the same spirit until peace has been restored."

Chamberlain replied with thanks and assurance of continued loyalty, devotion and determination "in the struggle for the defense of justice and liberty and the foundations of civilization."

The Royal Air Force in a third extensive flight over Germany dropped additional leaflets containing "a note to German people." Officials said enemy aircraft did not engage them in battle.

In Commons R. A. Butler, undersecretary of foreign affairs, said German planes generally were confining themselves to military objectives in Poland. Many civilians, nevertheless, had been killed, he added.

Sir Nevile Henderson, Britain's recalled Ambassador to Germany, tonight left for Rotterdam for England aboard a Dutch steamer, accompanied by about 40 members of his staff.

Outposts Pledge Support

From Fiji to Jaffa British outposts fell into line with the Empire's war upon Germany.

Here are some of the latest messages:

Bahamas—Solemn pledge of fidelity.

Fiji—Unswerving loyalty.

Arabs of Jaffa—Promise of cooperation.

Chief Rabbis of Palestine—Agreement to support Empire.

Northern Ireland—Promise to throw its entire resources into the conflict.

Australia—Full support for the government.

In Ireland it was emphasized by officials that the Free State would maintain a policy of strictest neutrality, extending no aid to Britain beyond ordinary trading activities. The department of industry and commerce forbade Irish ships of more than 100 tons to leave port without a license.

Naval Arms Treaties Denounced

London, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Great Britain today formally denounced all naval disarmament treaties which limit the size of warships and gun calibers.

"In consequence of the state of war which exists with Germany," the ministry of information announced, "and in conformity with provisions of Article 24 of the London Naval Treaty of 1936, Article 24 of the agreement with the U. S. S. R. in 1937 and with Poland in 1938, notification is made to foreign governments concerned that all obligations of His Majesty's Governments in the United Kingdom under the above-mentioned naval disarmament treaties are indefinitely suspended."

Grace Harriman Held in Lottery

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Grace Harriman, wife of Oliver Harriman, banker, was arraigned in Federal Court today under a New Mexico indictment charging her and five others with conspiring to run a lottery. She was released on $1,000 bail, for hearing September 15.

The alleged lottery was said to be for the benefit of the Carrie Tingley Crippled Children's Hospital fair in Hot Springs, N. Mex.

Sales' Ban Hits Allies

By Mark Sullivan

Our Neutrality Policy

ONE PROBLEM of this war arose to confront us this week. It will stay with us until it is decided. It can only be decided by Congress. It could have been decided, and many think it ought to have been decided, before the war began. The sooner it is decided, the better; the longer it stays a problem, the greater confusion it will cause us. In trying to make the problem clear, a good beginning is to reprint something this column said seven months ago, on February 3:

France and Britain are ordering military airplanes from American manufacturers. Necessarily they are for future delivery—the deliveries will go on over many months. Suppose, during that period, France and Britain become involved in actual war. At that point will the American airplanes previously ordered continue to be delivered? Or, at that point, will our government say to France and Britain, 'Sorry, but our neutrality policy forbids sale of implements of war to countries engaged in war!'"

That question was answered, for the moment, about 5 o'clock last Tuesday. At that hour President Roosevelt issued the proclamation required by our neutrality act. That proclamation forbade sale or shipment of implements of war to any nation at war. From that hour, those airplanes, ordered by Britain and France several months ago, could not be shipped. Wherever they were at that hour, in transit or still in factories, they stopped dead.

Cash Carry Act Or Strict Embargo?

MR. ROOSEVELT was obliged to take this step. He issued the proclamation because he had to—the existing neutrality law requires him to do it. Mr. Roosevelt does not like this neutrality law. He may not feel free to say this now, but he said it, strongly, a few weeks ago. At that time he asked Congress to change it. He wanted a neutrality law which would permit any nation to buy armament in America—provided that nation pays cash in full and carries the armament away in its own ships, the so-called "cash and carry" policy.

The question before us is, which of those neutrality laws does America want, the existing one, or the one Mr. Roosevelt asked Congress to pass? In order that the reader may be clear in his mind, it is desirable to make one point plain. Both these measures are strictly neutrality measures. One is just as neutral as the other. Both apply to all nations; both treat all nations alike. It happens that the law Mr. Roosevelt asked would help Britain and France—because they command the sea and thus can carry armament home. It happens, on the other hand, that the existing neutrality law favors Germany, because it prevents Britain and France from getting armament which they would otherwise buy in America.

The choice we must make is illustrated by the concrete case of these airplanes. Here are Britain and France deprived of airplanes which they would like to have, which they ordered long ago, and deprived also of other armament which they would buy here if our neutrality law permitted. But Britain and France cannot get this war material until, and if, Congress changes our neutrality law to what Mr. Roosevelt asked.

Sentimental View Bars Military Sales

HOW DO OUR people feel about this?

From a sentimental standpoint, a partisan standpoint, the question will be answered by individuals according to their feelings. Those who wish Britain and France to prevail will answer, "change the neutrality law." Such as do not share this wish, or do not feel the wish very strongly, may answer otherwise.

There are some who will answer sentimentally from a different point of view, on humanitarian grounds or grounds of taste. Many excellent people feel there is something repugnant in the mere fact of selling implements of war to any nation at any time. They prefer that America (that is, American manufacturers) be out of that kind of business. In fairness to this group it should be said that our existing neutrality law, while forbidding sale of armament, permits freely, without limit and without any conditions, the sale of other goods—food, raw materials and the like. To sell this sort of goods—so this group feels—is enough.

Let us consider an answer from a point of view which dismisses sentiment, which takes one standpoint and one only, the standpoint of America's national self-interest. In the welter of questions ahead of us, all intricate, many confusing, many conflicting with each other, it is going to be desirable for each of us to take and keep a point of view. A good one to take is our own national self-interest.

National Interest Demands Sale

HERE IS AMERICA arming, vigorously, with great expenditure. That we should arm has practically unanimous support—the measure for arming passed the House by 367 to 15, the Senate by 77 to 8.

The purpose of our arming, we know exactly. It is defense against foreign "philosophies of force"—that is how Mr. Roosevelt put it when he asked Congress to arm.

Now, for that purpose, everybody knows that an airplane sent to Britain or France at this time—sent without expense to us, actually paid for by Britain and France—will reduce the power of the philosophies of force. Therefore, it is as much a defense of us as an airplane added to our own equipment.

Further, these airplanes ordered by Britain and France, and other armament they would order if our law permitted, give training to our technical workers and tune up our factories for the manufacture of armament which we want ourselves. A dollar spent by Britain and France in our factories, at this time, may really be of more value to us than a dollar spent by ourselves later on. And, assuming Britain and France prevail, it may save us from spending many times a dollar in the future.

Line-Up Of Forces

By Barnet Nover

Belligerents And Neutrals

THE FIRST World War was, in its inception, a struggle between Austria-Hungary and Serbia. Hostilities between those two countries began during the last week of July, 1914.

Within a week, five of the six major European powers were involved in the struggle. Within a year practically every nation on the continent, with the exception of the Scandinavian countries, the Netherlands and Switzerland had been drawn in or were about to be drawn in. The entry of the United States, in 1917, very considerably increased the list of actual or nominal combatants, for the American lead was followed by China, Brazil, Panama, Cuba, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Siam and Liberia.

IF WHAT HAPPENED between 1914 and 1918 offers any guide to what may happen now there is a strong possibility that other nations besides those already engaged will ultimately participate in the present war.

At the moment the number of neutrals is greater than in the early months of the first world conflict. Now, as then, Germany is on one side and Great Britain and France on the other. Italy sits on the sidelines, as do the nations of this hemisphere, including the United States.

Besides Europe's traditional neutrals, i.e. Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries, the Netherlands and Spain, the neutral bloc includes all of the Balkan nations, the little Baltic republics, Turkey and Russia, with Portugal's status uncertain.

On the other hand, the solidarity of the British Commonwealth of Nations, which many had predicted could not withstand the impact of another European war, was demonstrated in the speedy action of Australia and New Zealand in joining forces with the mother country at the very start of hostilities. It is also revealed in the determination of Canada to do likewise and the decision approved by the Parliament of the Union of South Africa to break off relations with Germany.

DURING THE first World War the trend of diplomatic events was determined to a very large extent by military developments. It was the desperate situation which faced the allies early in 1915 which compelled them to pay Italy's price for that country's participation. It was the failure of the Gallipoli campaign, plus Turkey's readiness to give Bulgaria an outlet on the Aegean, that brought the latter country into the war on the side of the central powers. Germany's unrestricted submarine warfare, the product of her inability to break the stalemate in the west, led to America's entry. And so on.

There is reason to believe that the military developments in the present war will also have a bearing on the ultimate line-up.

COMMENT in the Italian press suggests, for instance, that Italy's neutrality may be tactical rather than based on any overwhelming determination to stay out at all costs.

Italy has indeed much to gain by remaining neutral. The achievement of her imperial ambitions might result from a French and British capitulation to her demands in return for Italy's adherence to the allied cause. It could also result from a defeat of the two democratic powers which would make it possible for Italy to seize what she cannot obtain without force. Thus, the possibility of Italy ultimately siding with Germany cannot yet be ruled out.

In the meantime, Italy's neutrality works to Germany's advantage by leaving a door through which overseas supplies can reach the Reich and by blocking the Brenner Pass as a possible gateway for a thrust into Germany.

Fully as much as Hitler's desertion of the anti-Comintern front by his pact with Stalin, it is Italian neutrality which makes certain the continued neutrality of Spain. Hungary's neutrality is similarly occasioned.

ITALIAN neutrality has also made it easier for the Balkan states to remain neutral.

Had Italy gone in on Germany's side, Yugoslavia's position would have become very difficult, indeed. On the other hand, the Russo-German pact which may contain secret provisions for an ultimate partition of Eastern Europe between the Nazi and Communist dictatorships, has frightened Rumania into a position of rigid neutrality, despite the fact that her independence is guaranteed by Great Britain and that she has an alliance with France.

Similarly, the presence on her borders of Greece, Turkey, Rumania and Yugoslavia has forced Bulgaria to remain neutral, too, despite her territorial claims against three of these countries.

THE POSITION of every one of these neutrals and of most others is, at best, precarious. It is doubtful if any of them wants to be involved in war. But the centripetal tendencies that operate in a war of continental dimensions may prove too great for some or all of them to withstand.

A short war, whichever side is victorious, would simplify their problem. If the war is dragged out, with the course of events now favoring one side, now the other, some of these neutrals will be under temptation to join the winning side so as to enjoy the fruits of victory. And others may find that despite their most earnest desires and most fervent hopes they are forced in. That is what happened to Belgium and Greece in the last war. It may happen to certain nations this time. For despite the old saying, it takes not two but one to make war and these unhappy neutrals may find themselves in the path of the juggernaut with no possibility of escape.

Thus it is that the trend of military events involves the fate not only of the actual belligerents but of all the nations on the periphery of the conflict, indeed, of all nations however remote from the slaughter. The longer the war the longer the list of belligerents is likely to be.

War Skyrockets D. C. Food Prices

Many grocers did not know what to charge for some of their products. Ordinarily, prices at the large chain stores are about the same but yesterday one system asked 64 cents for 10 pounds of sugar while around the corner you could get the same quantity for 55 cents at the branch store of a competing chain.

Chicken Up 3 Cents

"It's all very puzzling," said Gale E. Pugh, head of the wholesale house bearing his name. "I couldn't even get any quotations on shortening today. Luckily, we laid in our month's supply on Monday.

"Today I tried to get a price on turkeys for shipment next week but the producer wouldn't set a figure because feed prices are going up. That means I can't quote any advance prices to my customers either."

Pugh said chickens are up 3 cents a pound at country points, cooking and salad oil 3 cents a gallon higher, butter 1¼ to 1¾ cents. Frying chickens, which he sold for 20½ cents last week, were 25 cents yesterday. He predicted another 2-cent rise in eggs today.

One of the city's largest wholesale grocers reported it was deluged by phone calls from hotels, restaurants and institutions, all eager to know about price trends. Customers who ordinarily buy one or two 100-pound sacks of sugar at a time ordered 10 to 20 bags yesterday.

Calls It Profiteering

"It's profiteering, that's what it is," grumbled an independent grocer on U street northwest. "Today I have to get 65 cents for sugar, compared with 45 cents a week ago. Flour is up $1.25 a barrel, pork 50 cer cent, canned goods 10 to 15 per cent.

"Last week I paid 6½ cents a pound for lard and got 8 cents. Now I'm paying 12 cents and get what I can."

His lard quotations, however, were in conflict with those at most other cut-rate stores. Although both hog and vegetable shortenings are going up, lard was obtainable yesterday for 7½ to 9 cents a pound.

Pugh pointed out that the jump in eggs is seasonal and not due entirely to the war influence. Consumers today may expect to pay anywhere from 21 cents to 43 cents for eggs, depending on the size and quality.

Thrifty shoppers had a field day yesterday and the same situation probably will prevail today, due to the fluctuating market. For example, a 12-pound sack of flour was 39 cents at one chain store and 47 cents (same brand) at another.

Some retailers said they are paying higher prices on canned goods but the wholesalers interviewed reported no changes in this line. One dissatisfied housewife telephoned The Post to complain about the price she was paying for coffee, but wholesale prices on all brands have been the same all week, it was learned.

One of the large chains sent veal cutlets up another 2 cents yesterday, bringing the price to 49 cents. "Last week this time they were only 39 cents," said the meat cutter at one of the branches. At the same place lamb chops were 55 cents, compared with 45 cents last week.

"Today, for the first time this week, I succeeded in getting a price quotation on sugar—$5.75 a hundred," said a wholesaler. "Flour and sugar, they're going up out of sight. Canned goods, no change. Navy beans are up $2 a bag."

Wholesalers and retailers alike were so jittery about the price situation that they were reluctant to discuss it. Or, talking about prices, they asked that neither their names nor their establishments be mentioned.

They wondered what today will bring forth. And so, undoubtedly, do the housewives, who are wondering whether to stock their larders full in anticipation of higher prices or figure on an early drop and buy accordingly.

Secretary Wallace revealed the Government was investigating complaints of food "profiteering." He contended, however, that advances in prices in most farm prices had not been excessive.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Exercise Necessary For Vitality, Says Margaret Speaks

MOST WOMEN long to be either good-looking or successful. Many wish to be both, if possible. Either way, the realization of the wish takes energy, and when you are thin and run down, you just don't have it. Sometimes you probably wonder if every successful or lovely woman wasn't born with an extravagant surplus of energy.

Is that the way you feel? Then you will take a personal interest in the program followed by Margaret Speaks, the distinguished concert and radio soprano, who is good-looking, successful and busy. But if Miss Speaks didn't have a program ideally fitted to her needs, she could easily be too thin. Her overcrowded schedule would certainly produce tension, and tension will not only ruin anybody's looks but is disastrous to a singer's career, since it shows in her voice.

Outdoors in Hours Off

Miss Speaks doesn't try to do strenuous exercise, but she does exercise for the reason that "it takes regular exercise to keep one's nervous system running smoothly." During the week she is one of the hardest working singers in New York, but over the week-end she goes to a farm and gardens, takes long hikes, plays badminton and practices archery. She doesn't do one of those things right after the other until she is exhausted. Instead, she takes her time and gets enjoyment along with her exercise.

Archery is her favorite game. It is recommended enthusiastically for the girl who is too thin, with a tendency to stoop. If you learn to shoot properly, you will soon find a marked improvement in your posture, but, instructors warn, shooting with the body improperly aligned will make a poor posture worse. It will pay you to learn the correct shooting stance. In addition to correcting rounded shoulders, regular practice will improve the bust contour.

Calisthenics in Town

For the workaday in town, she does what the rest of us do—falls back on some formal calisthenics, which is not as much fun as the outdoor sports, but just as trustworthy. One of her standbys is a breathing and bending exercise:

Stand erect with the hands on the hips, draw a deep breath, hold it, bend the knees, squat to the floor, rise slowly to position . . . and exhale! Here's another: Lie flat on the floor on the back, arms straight out at the sides, legs straight down. Slowly bend the right leg and bring the knee up to the chest, inhaling as you do so. Return the leg to position as you exhale. Repeat with the left leg, then both together.

As a reward for her exercise program, Miss Speaks finds she is able to relax completely at any time. She lies down and takes a nap before a concert or a broadcast—something few people can do!

The Hands That Launched a Prize

Recently a vote by representatives from exhibits at the World's Fair was held to choose the prettiest girl employe. New York Gives Police Instructions In Case of War

New York, Sept. 6.

WE ARE A friendly and peaceable lot here, barring a few amiable homicides and thumpings over the head with intent to maim, but the past ten days have seen definite repercussions from the distressing matters over the water.

Police Chief Valentine called in his head officers and discussed with them what town pumps and culverts their 19,000 constables would guard in an emergency. To drive home the might of the Nation our mechanized cavalry brigade, with its tanks, motor-hauled artillery and armored cars, rumbled and clanked from one end of Manhattan Island to the other and back, and then went into camp at the Fair Grounds for a week, where the iron dobbins could be inspected at will.

But it is the Hudson River that stole the show in the dither department. When the Normandie came in with its platinum refugees from Paris, lots of the awe-stricken girls told me that the big skiff had zigzagged across the Atlantic as though the pond were sprinkled with U-boats, and we were vicariously thrilled to see the dear old Aquitania with all its windows painted black so no light-rays could reach the calm ocean.

Then, when the Bremen, the Normandie and the old four-stacker Aquie were held up while customs men searched them for guns and other contraband, excitement along the Hudson reached its peak. At last reports the boys had found nothing but soreheads, but it did give us a feeling of "doing our bit," and that the Government was keen-eyed and ready. And, of course, we hoped it need be ready for nothing but a busy and happy fall on the home front.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Distresses of suburban life. Owing to the fact that the recent drought has practically dried up the two wells on the country acre of her Yorktown Heights cottage, Mrs. Bertie Taylor, late of Indianapolis, has been coming to my Murray Hill igloo at the lunch hour for her daily bawth.

Well, we can always have our choice of royalty here, imported or home-grown, since this town is the great clearing house for people coming and going, east or west. In one day I saw Prince Feliz, ruler of the little Duchy of Luxembourg, being shown the skyline by Empire State Al Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. James Durbin, parents of a screen princess, were all a-smile as they came in on the Aquitania from a visit abroad. And why not? What a daughter!

And I saw little Betty Furness, late of the movies, lunching at Louis and Armand's the other noon. Little Betty is prettier than ever, since her marriage, and has evidently given up the camera for the home.

Thirtyish Spinster Is Tempted to Have Illicit Love Affair; Old Friend Asks How to Advise Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A lifelong friend has been a member of our household for the past five years, ever since her mother passed away and left her alone. This friend is in her middle thirties, a level-headed business woman, vivacious, refined and charming. Her spinsterhood has been a mystery to me, although she has stated that she does not care about marriage, and I know that she was nonchalant in her attitude toward the few men who have dated her.

However, for the past year she has seen a lot of a man with whom she has mutual business interests. For the past two months, he has been extremely attentive and my friend seems to be very fond of him. He is a gentleman and prosperous, financially. But here is the trouble—while he does not live with his family, he is married and has two teen-age children. He supports his family well and frankly says that his wife is happier living apart from him, although she will not give him a divorce because of religious principles.

There is every indication that the friendship will not remain platonic much longer. To my surprise, my friend has recently expressed the opinion that, in some cases, it is justifiable to override conventions in the matter of love, although she would prefer not to be confronted with the temptation. What should my attitude be in this case? What is a sensible point of view? I love my friend and I do not wish to see harm or heartbreak come to her.

I might also add that if my husband were to suspect that she had strayed from the straight and narrow path, his former high opinion of her would be lowered, and he would not desire her in our home. I know of no one who can better advise me in this situation than you. Sincerely,

PERPLEXED.

Seven-Point Warning Issued by Expert

DEAR PERPLEXED: Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the Los Angeles Institute of Family Relations, has proposed the "sensible point of view" which any disinterested counselor should take in weighing a proposition of this kind. Writing in the March, 1938, issue of Your Life Magazine, he gives seven major reasons why the unmarried woman will do well to look before she leaps into a "free love" partnership arrangement.

This article, entitled "Unmarried, But——," is obtainable in pamphlet form, I am told, from the Institute headquarters, located at 607 South Hill street, Los Angeles, Calif. In February of this year the same magazine published another article on the same subject by the same author, this one entitled "The Woman Pays—How Much?" It, too, is offered as a pamphlet.

Dr. Popenoe's reasons, which I am taking the liberty of presenting here in skeleton outline, are these: 1. Continual anxiety as to pregnancy—which subtly destroys the woman's peace of mind. 2. Continual anxiety as to secrecy, which must be preserved to protect her social or professional position.

3. Continual anxiety that her partner shall keep on caring. Since he has accepted no responsibilities, there is the ever-present possibility that he will backslide out of the situation. And if he is already married, his paramour can scarcely expect him to be more faithful to her than he is to his wife. 4. The necessity for complete emotional re-orientation to life, a difficult adjustment for the mature woman, particularly the business woman. A secret love affair consumes much time and energy and invites much revelry, all of which may subtract from professional efficiency.

5. Loss of personal freedom, for she is tied to her lover by invisible bonds, and while he controls her, she cannot control him. Although she is vitally affected by his comings and goings, there is nothing she can do about them and she cannot seek him out. 6. Inability to share her satisfactions. She has no place in his circle of friends and relatives, and she cannot openly rejoice in his accomplishments. And, 7, Denial of motherhood, which, as Dr. Popenoe points out, "may well prove to be the most serious part of the whole situation," since the desire to bear children to the man she loves is a deep-seated part of the emotional life of the normal woman.

To weigh the advisability of an illicit alliance through the objectively analytical eyes of Dr. Popenoe is to recognize that questions of morality and propriety are scarcely more pertinent than the question of individual salvation. All the odds seem to be against the psychological — the nervous, mental and emotional—survival of the indecisive woman who tries to introduce sexual experience secretly into her life, particularly when the experience carries no guarantee of full social protection from the man.

If you would provide a response to your friend's indirectly indicated need of guidance, I suggest that you give her the two articles condensed above. Copies of the magazine might be found at the library, or you may purchase the pamphlets aforementioned, for only a few cents. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Gentler Sex

——By Malvina Lindsay

West of Buffalo

"Have a good time back home?"

"Oh—so-so."

"How's everybody in Junctionville?"

"Just the same. The place hasn't changed a bit. It's simply dead from the neck up."

"I don't see how you stood it."

"Well, of course they get the same radio programs we do here—they hear Amos and Andy every night—and the papers really have a lot of the same news and that helped some."

"See the Jitneys?"

"Yes, they're still there. They have a lovely new home. Tom's president of the bank and the Chamber of Commerce."

"Tom always was smart. It's funny how he sticks around there. Did you see many of the old crowd?"

"Yes, I ran on to a lot of them out at the country club."

"Don't tell me they have a country club!"

"Oh yes, and they have a new auditorium. Why, my dear, they actually saw Helen Hayes! And they had 'Brother Rat.'"

"No! Why they must be stepping along."

"In a way, yes. Still you feel so far away from things. And of course, they don't have any night clubs yet to speak of . . . or any really good stores."

"It must have been awfully dreary."

"Yes, you don't have a sense of things happening as you do here. And then the people— so many had grown up and had gotten married and were having children. Why the place simply wasn't the same."

"Did you see Grace Blink?"

"Yes she's still there in the same old job."

"Poor old Grace."

"Mabel Putter's finally got away. I saw her in Kansas City."

"How's Kansas City?"

"Just the same old place. Of course they've had a lot of excitement and put a lot of people in jail, but outside of that there wasn't anything going on."

"Where else did you go?"

"Oh, a lot of places. I stopped a day in St. Louis."

"How's St. Louis?"

"Just moseying along. They weren't excited at all about the war. Of course, I will say this for St. Louis, though. It has a very nice municipal opera. But someway the people seem awfully slow."

"Did you see the Steppits?"

"No. Lelia was in Reno. She's going to marry some big oil man—at least that's what Maude told me in Chicago."

"Have a good time in Chicago?"

"Sort of. It hasn't changed much. I will say though that Marshall Fields is a great institution. Still you feel so far away from things out there."

"See the Diggs?"

"Oh, yes. He's writing a book about the European crisis. We simply lived on the radio while I was there."

"The radio is a wonderful invention. I had a letter from Aunt Ella in Los Angeles and she said she and Uncle Bert had heard Chamberlain's speech! Can you beat that!"

"Well, in Detroit—I visited the Geezers there—we heard it perfectly."

"Did you enjoy Detroit?"

"It's all right—for a Western city. And their papers carry a lot of the same columnists ours do here. You know I had been cutting out all of Parmalee Pickle's columns and sending them to Marcia Geezer and there they had him right in their own paper. And another thing, they've had the Oxford movement out there."

"Well, Detroit's sort of Eastern in a way."

"Yes. Still I couldn't help feeling as if I were out of things. And I felt just the same way in Cleveland."

"I know."

"In fact I didn't feel as if I were getting into the war zone again until I headed for Washington. It was just sort of like—well getting back to civilization."

Liquified Silk Used to Set Hair In Record Time

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor

The term "silkplating" of the hair may soon become a household word, for chemists have recently achieved just that. For years, beauty science had searched for a quick drying wave set lotion which actually dried hair in less than the usual 45 minutes. Realizing the importance of conserving time for busines women, chemists went to work to discover a preparation which would wave the hair and keep it set, at the same time dry it really rapidly and thoroughly.

Their answer came a few months ago when they created a lotion which they called mistosilk. It is a pure raw silk liquified, which not only sets the hair in record time but actually silkplates the hair with a lustrous sheen. The drying time is cut to a fourth.

In a recent experiment the fragrant liquid silk was sprayed a little at a time on a model's hair, at a local beauty shop. It was then 10:38. At 10:53 the girl's head was placed under a dryer. At 11:03, the model emerged radiantly attractive with a glossy sheen to her hair that really could be called silken. This time saving lotion contains no alcoholic or other drying solutions, some of which gum up the hair or scalp.

Rough Fabrics To Be Popular

Rough fabrics are going to be increasingly important in men's suits this fall for town as well as country wear. Gray-greens, blue-greens, lovats or heater tones, browns and grays are the predominating colors in novelty patterns. colorings are generally louder with the color often carrying the pattern, instead of the pattern carrying the fabric. Young men are wearing herringbones and fancy weaves for business while university men, particularly, favor the rough fabrics such as Shetlands, tweeds and cheviots.

Lounge or drape clothing—with broader shoulders, fuller chests and suppressed waists—is also predominant among younger men but the demand is growing among all men, too, because these streamlined effects are flattering to the figure.

New Draperies For Fall

What a tonic to your living-room handsome new-style draperies are! Lovely triple swags against a straight valance, a "grace note" of fringe!

Imagine them in shimmering rayon damask of champagne, with heavy sateen swags and fringe of chartreuse. Or would you prefer two rich tones of blue?

These stunning draperies cost little when you make them yourself.

To get a rich draped effect with the swags, have each twice as deep as you want the finished swag to be. Fold and cut the ends on a slant.

The valance itself is simply a straight piece of goods lined and interlined. Cut the interlining—a stiff material such as duck or buckram—the size you want the finished valance to be. Turn and baste edges of damask valance over interlining, baste and stitch on sateen lining, add a pretty fringe.

Now fasten to the valance the finished swags—adding ornaments where they poin. Sew tape across the top of valance and tack to the valance board.

War Disrupts Travel Plans of D. C. Society

Susan Ertz Unable to Sail as Scheduled; Her Husband, Maj. McCrindle, Is on Duty; The Tydingses Are Away on Voyage

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

WHILE GLOBE-TROTTING Americans are coming home in droves, a number of notables planning end-of-summer and autumn trips to this country have called them off. A case in point, is Susan Ertz, noted novelist, who was scheduled to arrive here September 18, accompanied by her husband, Maj. J. Ronald McCrindle.

The couple several weeks ago booked passage on the Britannic, which was to sail from England on Saturday. Well, the ship's departure had been canceled indefinitely because of the war; Maj. McCrindle, who is managing director of British Airways, has been called to service in the air ministry; and Miss Ertz's visit to Washington has gone the way of most peace-time plans.

Meanwhile, intrepid Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings are taking a sailing vacation. After bidding good-by to Mrs. Tydings' father, Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, who sailed Tuesday on the Nieuw Amsterdam for his post in Brussels, the Senator and his wife left on a short cruise—destination unannounced.

The trip will be finished by September 17, and they will return to Oakington, their estate near Havre de Grace, Md. They spent the first part of this week in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria.

At the same hotel on Monday and Tuesday were Col. and Mrs. Thurston Hughes who arrived a few days ago from Quarry Heights, Canal Zone.

Back home and "settled for the season" are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, who recently returned from a six-week vacation on the West Coast and in Hawaii. They were hardly back home the middle of August when Mrs. Draper left again for a series of visits in New England, spending most of the time with her sister, Mrs. Thomas Crimmins, in New York. Early this week, Mrs. Draper came back to Washington to join her husband. He's a member of the Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System.

Mrs. Emil Hurja on Way Home

Mrs. Emil Hurja, who has been abroad most of the summer and was in Poland a few days before the war broke, sailed from Copenhagen Saturday on the Kungsholm (Swedish-American Line) and is expected to arrive in New York on Sunday. Mr. Hurja, who spent yesterday in New York and will return to Washington today, will go back to New York again this week-end to meet his wife.

Meanwhile, goings and comings of another Hurja also are worthy of note. Emil's brother, Arthur, who makes his home in Chicago, has been commuting between there and here recently, while working on The Pathfinder.

If the Manhattan docks in New York on schedule at 8 a. m. today, something like an old home week with a Capital accent will take place on at least one part of the pier. Waiting there will be a number of Washingtonians who have relatives aboard. Melville Bell Grosvenor went to New York last night to be on hand bright and early this morning to welcome home Mrs. Grosvenor. With her is Mrs. William A. Morgan, who will come on directly to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Grosvenor will go from New York to Gibson Island to join their three children, Helen, Alexander and Gilbert, who have been there since Saturday. They returned then from Nova Scotia, where they spent part of their vacation time with their grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor. According to present plans, Mr. and Mrs. Grosvenor and their children will be back in Washington tomorrow.

The Piersons Can't Make Trip

It seems that much as Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, and Mrs. Pierson wanted to go to war-torn Warsaw from Paris, their airplane passage could not be arranged. They are now in rural France and will sail homeward from Havre on Saturday on the S. S. Washington. The latter is scheduled to arrive in New York on September 16.

Where to go a-vacationing when you planned your wardrobe for England in September is a problem puzzling several Washingtonians—among them two journalistic couples, Mr. and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Short. The Griffins had their bags packed to sail the end of last month on the Aquitania and called off their trip a day before it was to begin. The Shorts were to be off next Monday, but canceled their reservations just before war was declared.

Now both are consulting travel folders like mad, trying to figure out where cold-weather clothes of the type that suit England's climate at this season would fit the bill closer home. At present, the Griffins are toying with the idea of heading toward California by the northern route. The Shorts probably will do their holidaying at Capon Springs W. Va.

Shift in Thanksgiving and Cancellation Of Horse Show Upset Plans of Society

PLANS FOR THE coming social season in Washington are beginning to look slightly sour. First there was the announcement by President Roosevelt that Thanksgiving would be celebrated this year on November 23, which threw into a perfect dither the debutantes who had picked the original date months ahead for their coming-out dances and teas. They have joined with the football coaches, the dissenters, and the patriotic citizens of Plymouth, Mass., who think the whole idea is terrible, but with the help of their social secretaries the debutantes hope somehow to muddle through.

Now the news that the Inter-American Horse Show has been canceled means that the fall season will not start off with the usual bang. For several years this event always has been the first large get-together of the season. Those prominent in official, diplomatic and residential circles occupied the boxes at Meadowbrook, and hundreds of others eagerly booked seats in the grandstand. The show was considered one of the most spectacular outdoor exhibitions to be seen in this country, and the jumps were terrifically high.

Then there was always a great round of teas, dinners and cocktail parties in honor of the riders. In the past few years the Belgians, Mexicans and Chileans have been represented among the foreign teams, which meant that the Washington embassies of those countries entertained lavishly in their honor.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT that Premier Eamon de Valera of Ireland has canceled his visit here, scheduled for this month, is another blow to the season's program. This is the second time that the statesman has been obliged to change his plans to come to this country. The first was early last spring, after the Irish Legation staff here and the consulates throughout the country had put in hours of work getting ready for his tour.

Capital society—even that part which is not art-minded—will miss the brilliant preview showings of the Washington Gallery of the Museum of Modern Art. From the time this gallery was open here two years ago by Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. George Garrett, all of the prominent people flocked there, but as financial support lagged behind verbal enthusiasm, Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Garrett decided to close the doors.

MME. ESPIL has returned from Hot Springs, Va., where she spent the summer, and has joined her husband, the Argentine Ambassador, at the Embassy on New Hampshire avenue.

Mrs. George Howe is back for a few days from Bristol, R. I., where she is summering, and where Mr. Howe spent Labor Day week-end. Last night a few friends got together with the Howes for supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward on O street in Georgetown. Mr. Howe is staying there temporarily, having leased his home nearby to a State Department couple, until October. Those present last night included Edward Burling, jr. (Mrs. B. is still away); Robert Coe and Mr. Woodward, who as a representative of the State Department was to have accompanied Prince Consort Felix of Luxemburg to Chicago and St. Paul until the latter changed his plans and sailed for Europe because of the war.

Mr. Howe is working on plans for the new home which Mr. and Mrs. Algernon Davy are going to build near Middleburg. Mr. and Mrs. Davy, who come from Santa Barbara, Calif., have returned there after spending several weeks in the hunt country.

Roland Hill To Winter Here

Mr. Hill, a bachelor, formerly State Director of the National Emergency Council, and Past President of the Young Democrats of Minnesota, is prominent in social circles in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago. He has been chairman of the Bachelor's cotillion given yearly in St. Paul for the debutantes of the Twin Cities. Cousins of Mr. Hill include the famous authoress, Miss Martha Ostenso; Representative Knute Hill and Richard Carlson, the motion picture star.

On Tuesday Mr. Hill entertained at luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel when his guests included George Heffelfinger and George Dayton 2d, of Minneapolis; John Ordway, of St. Paul, and Marshall Field, jr., of Chicago. They were en route to their home by air after a South American cruise on Mr. Field's yacht, which is anchored in Florida.

S. degrees from that university, and is at present associated with General Motors Co. in Buffalo. Miss Sasscer is an alumnus of Duke University, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Miss Frances Paul, W. R. Thoms Wed

Instead of the traditional white satin, Miss Frances Evelyn Paul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Jennings Paul, of Hyattsville, Md., chose a dress of gray alpaca made with short sleeves for her wedding last evening at 8 o'clock to Walter Rudolph Thoms, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thoms, of Pleasantville, N. J.

The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul, and was witnessed only by members of the families and close friends. The Rev. Arthur Le Baron Ribble officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her bouquet was of orchids and lilies of the valley, and she wore slippers to match her frock. Her maid of honor and only attendant was her cousin, Miss Evelyn Lewis, who wore moss green alpaca, made like the bride's dress and trimmed in brown ruching. She carried rubrum lilies tied with brown satin ribbon. Jack Cummings, of Atlantic City, was best man.

A reception followed the ceremony. The bride's mother wore a gown of black moire with a white lace jacket and a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Thoms was in Wallis blue lace with a corsage of yellow roses. The house was decorated with autumn flowers and oak leaves.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Hyattsville. As her going-away costume the bride chose a black frock with a silver fox cape. The bride attended Southeastern University. Mr. Thoms studied at Bordentown Military Institute, Bordentown, N. J.

Miss Wharton has been attending Bennington for two years and prior to that was a student at American University. She took a summer course in philosophy at George Washington University this season.

At the completion of the course she visited the World's Fair in New York City and also went to Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. Jouette Shouse To Return Shortly

Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who took her daughter, Joan Dodd, and Patricia Prochnik, one of next season's debutantes, on a vacation trip to Maine, is now in Cape Cod. She expects to return shortly to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Shouse originally intended to go to Europe this summer, but at the last moment, business obliged them to remain in this country.

A reception at the home of the bride followed the ceremony. Mrs. Weidemann wore a gown of orchid lace and chiffon with a matching hat and an orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother, who was gowned in rose velvet and hat of the same shade, topped off her ensemble with a corsage of gardenias and sweetheart roses. The house was decorated with white asters and gladioli.

On their return from a cruise to Havana, the couple will be at home after October 1 at 119 Glenwood road, Edgewood, Bethesda, Md. When she left for her honeymoon, the bride wore a Tuscon wine suit trimmed with beaver fur and a corsage of talisman roses.

Washington Alumnae Entertains at Wardman For Group About to Enter Various Colleges

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The rushing season for Gamma Phi Beta Sorority is on. Although there is not an active chapter at any of the colleges here, the Washington alumnae yesterday entertained at a luncheon for girls who will be rushed at the schools which they enter this fall as freshmen.

Mrs. Elma Dykes Dulaney and Mrs. George W. Lipscomb were in charge of arrangements for the affair which was given at the Wardman Park Hotel. Peach gladiolas decorated the long table at which the guests were seated and both active chapter members home for the summer holidays, and alumnae members were present to greet the rushees.

William and Mary College had the largest representation among the school attended by the Washington girls.

National Conclave Scheduled Here

Gamma Phi Betas in the Capital are particularly active this year as they will be hostesses to the national convention of the organization, scheduled for June 20-24, 1940, at the Wardman Park. Mrs. A. Burke Summers is national convention chairman and resigned her office as president of the local alumnae chapter to handle the details of next summer's conclave.

Mrs. Paul Whitney, who succeeded her as president of the Washington alumnae, received the guests yesterday. Other alumnae present included Mrs. Ronald Billington, Mrs. Donald Halstead, Mrs. C. A. Betts, Mrs. Ivan Bickelhaupt, Mrs. H. A. Mathieson, Mrs. Robert McD. Gray, Mrs. Ronald Callander, Mrs. J. M. Curtis and Mrs. James A. Ralls.

The list of active members and rushees indicates that several of the girls represent the second generation in Gamma Phi Beta membership.

Many Rushees Among Guests

Those who leave for college this fall and were the honor guests included the Misses Jane Schwab, Mary Cramer, Helen Matchett, Glenora Whitman, Jean Andrews, Doris Speake, Marcella Lipscomb, Patricia Coleman, Annabelle Jones, all of whom will enter William and Mary as freshmen; Nancy Bickelhaupt and Edith Betts, both of whom will enroll at the University of Wisconsin; Ruth Billington, Penn State College; Lathrop Beale and Patricia Ann Taylor, Randolph-Macon; Shirley Boeteler, Ohio Wesleyan and Jean McLeod, Syracuse.

Active chapter members present included the Misses Betty Wood, who attends William and Mary; Louise Watkins, who was graduated in June from Vanderbilt; Ellen Lindsay, of William and Mary; Virginia Steuart, University of Wisconsin; Barbar Richmond, Randolph-Macon; Betty Bull, William and Mary; Dorothy Spindle, Northwestern; Evelyn Kempfer, William and Mary; Mary Ruddell, who is transferring this year from William and Mary to George Washington University; Phyllis Hyle, William and Mary; Jane Groggin, William and Mary.

Increase in Scholarship Fund Is Goal of Columbian Women

Miss Margaret Pepper to Head Organization This Year; Season to Open In October With Business Meeting

A substantial increase in the scholarship fund with which they aid students at George Washington University will be the aim of the Columbian women of the university this season, according to Miss Margaret Pepper.

Miss Pepper, who succeeds Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of the university, as head of the organization, has announced her committees for the coming season. It will open with a business meeting the first Tuesday in October.

Miss Ruby Nevins heads the committee on membership; Miss Katherine Scrivener, program; Miss Agnes Garrels, scholarship; Miss Emma Buechele, publicity; Mrs. Charles R. Naeser and Mrs. Wolfram K. Legner, house; Mrs. Russell Shelk, hospitality; Mrs. Robert Griggs, finance; Miss Harriet Garrels, university relationship.

More Scholarships Are Needed Now

"There have been more requests for scholarships this year than ever before," said Miss Pepper, "and we feel that our fund is inadequate to meet the need. Last year we gave assistance to eight students—not full scholarships but substantial aid through the college year."

It is the plan of the Columbian Women, Miss Pepper explained, to help students during their entire course at the university, otherwise the one year or two spent there may prove to be lost effort with the goal of a complete college education unattained.

The Columbian Women were organized nearly 50 years ago and have carried on active work in behalf of the university ever since. Their monthly meetings include business, a program with a speaker of prominence and a tea hour. They have a sum invested in the university, interest on which is used for the scholarships they provide. This is augmented each year by the proceeds of a benefit.

New Kind of Benefit Planned

In previous years this has been a card party and musicale but this season something new will be arranged, the nature of which has not yet been decided. The function will be given in November, Miss Pepper has announced, in time to avoid the busy season immediately preceding Christmas.

New officers for the year are besides Miss Pepper, Mrs. Russell McNitt, first vice president; Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, second vice president; Miss Helen Gantley, recording secretary; Mrs. DeWitt Bennett, corresponding secretary; Miss Elizabeth Middlemas, assistant corresponding secretary; Miss Pauline Lohman, treasurer; Mrs. Thomas B. Brown, assistant treasurer, and Miss Sarah Lerch, historian.

B. and P. W. Massing Data

The Washington Business and Professional Women's Club is preparing to assemble facts and figures showing that the Capital is the ideal place for the headquarters of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

The president, Judge Lucy Howorth, announced last night at the initial meeting of the executive board that a committee would be appointed to make the investigation. For some years the federation has been accumulating a fund for a national headquarters in Washington, but a resolution, passed at the biennial convention in Kansas City this summer, recommended Chicago as a better location and asked for an investigation.

Judge Howorth also announced the appointment of Mrs. Grace Keller Cooper, clerk of the library committee of the House of Representatives, as chairman of program co-ordination. In this capacity, she will direct the local club in study of the program outlined by the national federation.

Dr. Florence Armstrong, chairman of the research committee, was authorized by the board to co-operate with Mrs. Mary R. Beard, national chairman of the special study of the economic status of married women. This study is being conducted on recommendation of Miss Earlene White, former president, and now honory president of the national federation.

The local club is planning to invite the new national president, Dr. Minnie R. Maffett, to visit Washington.

Federation Plans Week-End Tour To World's Fair

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, is conducting a party of federation members and their friends to the New York World's Fair this weekend.

The party leaves tomorrow evening at 5 o'clock and will return Sunday at midnight. Other club members belonging to organizations not affiliated with the federation may also join the group by communicating with Mrs. Daniel, she has announced. The trip is arranged at special rates and is being made at this time to coincide with the District Day celebration at the fair.

Those who will go include Mrs. R. Bruce Bare, Mrs. Charles O. Simms, Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, Mrs. Harry Guttridge and her daughter, Eloise; Miss Carrie Galvin, Mrs. Orris James and Mrs. David K. Bolton.

Army Daughters to Open Season Monday With Meeting and Luncheon at Club

THE ARMY DAUGHTERS will open their season Monday with a business meeting at the Army and Navy Club at noon, followed by a luncheon at 1 o'clock.

The president, Mrs. Claude W. Dudley, with Mr. Dudley, recently returned from a summer in the West. They spent six weeks "dude ranching" at the Carr Canyon Ranch, in Arizona, and also went to California to visit their son, William B. Dudley, who is in Stanford University.

The Army Daughters are preparing for an active season and will discuss program plans at their business meeting Monday. About 200 of the 1,500 members of the national organization are in Washington and from 50 to 100 attended the monthly meetings.

FRANK B. STEELE, governor of the Society of Mayflower Descendants of the District, accompanied by Mrs. Steele, is in Plymouth, Mass., where they have been attending the triennial meeting of the organization. The program always includes a ceremony commemorating the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth Rock. Among other Washingtonians there for the occasion is Miss Bertha Robertson.

Mr. Steele is also registrar general of the Sons of the American Revolution and president of the Arts Club of Washington. Mrs. Steele is an active member of the D. A. R. and president of the Huguenot Society.

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs have recently returned from their summer vacations. Mrs. Louis Felton has just arrived home from a two-month South American cruise.

Mrs. Thomas H. Faris, chairman of press for the federation has returned from a motor trip to Martin's Ferry, Ohio, where she visited her mother who accompanied her back to Washington to spend two weeks.

Mrs. Thomas C. Atkeson, with Dr. Atkeson and their daughter, Helen, is home from Orkney Spring, Va., where they have a summer cottage. She is now busy with preparations for the second of the federation's benefit parties for the golden jubilee fund of the General Federation, scheduled for the late fall.

MRS. LOUISE FRASER, of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, has spent the summer "seeing America first." Although she was born and reared in Colorado, she had never been to the top of Pike's Peak and she included that ascent in her itinerary. She also made the swing across the continent and back, attending both the San Francisco and New York World's fairs.

FRANCES POWELL HILL spoke at the Zonta luncheon yesterday at the Y. W. C. A., telling of her experience in establishing her own real estate business. Miss Lily Everett, of Asheville, N. C., was a guest at the meeting.

THE SOROPTIMISTS yesterday opened their season of weekly luncheons in the Cabinet Room in the Willard Hotel, with Mrs. Jean Bennett, the president, presiding. Members exchanged accounts of their vacations and Miss Genevieve Groce, of the San Francisco Club, who was a guest, told of a recent trip to Europe by way of Central and South America. Miss Groce is "Jean Abby", of the "Woman's Home Companion."

Senior Mizrachi Tea Opens Season

The Senior Mizrachi entertained yesterday afternoon at a tea at the home of Mrs. Max Cayton, 2948 Macomb street. The affair was given for members and prospective members and marked the opening of the season.

Mrs. Dora Donzis was chairman of the tea, assisted by Mrs. Goldie Wolk, co-chairman. Mrs. Zemach Green, wife of Rabbi Green of Ohev Sholem Congregation, talked on the need for assistance to the Jews in Palestine, especially since the war.

Mrs. Bernat Weiss was introduced as the new president of the Junior Mizrachi. A short song recital by Miss Anna Rosen closed the program.

Ramspeck Says U. S. Workers Guard Liberty

He Addresses Federal Employes' Session At San Francisco

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Sept. 6.—Honesty and efficiency in Government are major guarantees of the preservation of liberty and freedom, Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, told Federal employes at their biennial convention here today.

"I believe that the future of our democracy depends upon satisfactory execution of policies in the interest of all the people by a public personnel selected upon merit and retained for satisfactory service," the chairman of the House Civil Service Committee told delegates to the convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

A letter from President Roosevelt outlining recent action to extend the merit system to Federal workers was read by President Luther C. Steward of the federation. In a formal reply, the federation pledged its efforts to bring about a system of employment untinged with political influence.

Lieut. Col. Tenney Speaks

The War Department, one of the most conservative Federal organizations in the approach to civilian personnel problems, is now engaged in studying an automatic promotions plan, a training program and an appeals system for employe grievances, Lieut. Col. C. H. Tenney, chairman of the department's civilian personnel committee, told the National Federation of Federal Employes' biennial convention today.

The convention, which opened Monday with a record attendance, was told by Lieut. Col. Tenney that the department wants to abandon the practice of employing ordnance workers through private employment agencies in cases where the Civil Service Commission has no registers. The United States Employment Service, he said, will be used for this class of employment.

The chief topic among the hundreds of resolutions was the merit system, with retirement and classification extension following in interest. Tuesday was designated as "National Federation of Federal Employees Day" at the Golden Gate Exposition. Tonight the delegates will have a banquet and ball at the convention hotel.

Retirement Program

The convention adopted a retirement program calling for optional retirement at 60 after 30 years' service, compulsory retirement at 70; a minimum annuity of $20 a month; diasbility retirement at 60, and optional retirement at 55 in some circumstances. Ulrey J. Biller, of Washington, chairman of the retirement committee, submitted the report.

The convention also passed a resolution opposing assignment of military personnel to nonmilitary posts.

HOLC Auditor Made Member of Adventurers' Club

J. H. Armitage, of Alexandria, a soft-spoken auditor for the Home Owners Loan Corporation, returned from New York yesterday, with a certificate naming him to membership in the Adventurers' Club, and renewed memories of a four-year struggle to push a railroad 200 miles through the Brazilian jungle.

He went to New York for a reunion with 70 members of the Madeira-Mamore Association, survivors of the engineering and technical staff who helped build the railroad from Guajara-Merim on the Bolivian border to Porto Velho, 30 years ago.

Armitage recalled that he went down to the Brazilian railroad job in 1909. He was 19 and weighed 194 pounds. He now weighs 147.

Washington Gets Real Fall Weather

"Typical fall weather" came to Washington yesterday, bringing the coldest temperature since July 17, the Weather Bureau said.

Officials said that the maximum of 75 at 3:15 p. m. and minmum of 58 at 6 a. m. were "normal" for the end of September. The minimum temperature was the same as that recorded July 17. Officials said they had to look back to May 19 to find a lower mark.

The weather in Washington today will be partly cloudy and somewhat warmer, the Bureau said.

Sayres Robbed Of Clothes, Guns

Clothing and jewelry valued at $449 were stolen from the home of Francis B. Sayre, new High Commissioner to the Philippines, at 4853 Rockwood Parkway northwest, last month, it was reported to police yesterday.

The thieves made off with five of the Cimmissioner's suits, several of his wife's dresses and coats and a quantity of children's clothes.

A watch presented to Mr. Sayre by the Chamber of Commerce of Houston, Tex., a Phi Betta Kappa pin and assorted liquors also were taken, he reported.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.—Adv.

Hazen Tells Police To Be Courteous in "Jaywalk" Cases

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday admonished members of the Metropolitan Police Department against resorting to unnecessary force in regulating pedestrian traffic.

His warning followed several complaints against methods of some policemen. One protest came from a 65-year-old woman, who said an officer took her arm and forcibly made her return to the curb.

"No officer," said Hazen, "should use force in regulating pedsertians unless it is necessary to make arrests in flagrant violations. We are striving for courteous enforcement of all laws—and I'm going to see to it this policy is adhered to by every policeman."

Scarlato Faces New Lottery Trial

Samuel Scarlato, 24, of the 600 block H street northeast, was charged with lottery law violations yesterday for the second time within a year.

He was first charged with the possession of lottery slips last October. After he was fined $100, police recommended that his driving permit be revoked. Several days ago the Board of Revocations approved the recommendation and Scarlato's permit was taken up.

Yesterday, vice squad police said they stopped him while he was driving an automobile. In the back of the machine, they said, were alleged numbers slips. They charged him with their possession, operating a lottery and driving without a permit.

War Boom Expected In District

More Visitors and Increase in U. S. Workers Like 1914's Predicted

By Edward T. Folliard.

What effect will the European war have on Washington? The answer depends on many things—on the duration of the struggle, for example, and on whether this Nation is able to stay out.

But if the war of 1914-18 is any guide, Washington will be affected in many ways regardless of the role America plays. The city's tempo will be stepped up, certain Government departments and agencies will expand, and businessmen and tourists will come to the city in greater numbers.

In the years of 1914-15-16, before the United States declared war on Germany, there was a steady, if not spectacular, increase in the number of Federal workers. After this country's entry into the war, of course, the number was more than quadrupled, from 35,477 in 1916 to 117,760 on Armistice Day, 1918.

122,902 Latest Figure

The latest figure, announced by the Civil Service Commission in May, was 122,902. However, a retrenchment program has been under way, and the number now may be lower.

With European travel cut off and with the New York World's Fair continuing another year, the prospect for tourist business in Washington is excellent. In fact, 1939 already promises to be a record year, with well over 2,000,000 tourists expected before the year is out. Next to the Government payroll, the money spent by visitors is Washington's greatest economic boon.

President Roosevelt has not indicated when he will call a special session of Congress. There seems little doubt, however, that Congress will come back well in advance of the regular January 3 session. That brings back not only 96 Senators and 435 Representatives, but many free-spending lobbyists.

Drowsiness Disappeared

In 1914 before the outbreak of the World War, Washington was a charming but rather drowsy city. Three years later it was jammed with newcomers, reeking with money, and confronted with a housing shortage that was not corrected until 1926.

Some thought that, after the armistice, the city would revert to its old easy-going ways, even its old size. But that Washington was gone forever.

The changes became notable long before America got into the war. Foreign uniforms were fairly common on the streets. The French sent over a commission headed by Andrew Tardieu to direct war purchases. It took over an entire apartment house at Fifteenth and L streets. The British sent a similar commission, which had its headquarters on Sixteenth street, near Columbia road.

It may be that Washington is in for another great change.

Truck Crushes District Boy, 13; Crash Injuries Kill Trainman

Washington traffic claimed two more lives yesterday, bringing the total of fatalities here in two days to three.

Thirteen-year-old John Dickey was crushed under the wheels of a truck in front of his home, 1630 Wisconsin avenue northwest, when he ran into the street on his way to buy a loaf of bread. He died a short time later at Gorgetown Hospital.

STUART

Ran Into Truck's Path

The Dickey boy had been sent by his parents to a bread truck parked near his home, when he ran into the path of a dump truck. Police said the truck was operated by Allen L. Lloyd, 21, of 3214 N street northwest, who was ordered to attend a coroner's inquest. The truck was empty at the time.

Stuart, a brakeman for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, was hurt when his automobile overturned three times following a collision with another machine. A reckless driving charge was placed against Raymond C. Reinoehl, 47, of Cottage City, Md., driver of the second car.

Wife and Daughter Uninjured

Stuart's wife, Mrs. Lillie M. Stuart, and his daughter, Mrs. Georgia Gritton, were riding with him when the accident occurred. They were uninjured.

The two deaths yesterday brought the District traffic toll to 60, 4 below the number at this time last year.

Funeral services for Stuart will be held at his home Friday at 1 p. m. He will be buried at Forest Oak Cemetery, Gaithersburg, Md.

Man Is Injured

Ellis Payne, 30, of Rockville, Md., suffered a possible facture of his back and severe cuts about the face and head yesterday in an automobile accident near Gaithersburg. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Bethesda Rescue Squad.

Dolores Hall, 4, colored, was seriously injured when she was knocked down by a car in front of her home, 37 R street northwest. She was taken to Freedmen's Hospital with possible fractures of the skull and legs.

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university, recited the office of the dead for the priests, both of whom died Sunday.

Members of the varsity football squad served as honorary pallbearers for Father McDonough. Headed by Frank Fenwick, they were Mike Connolly, Frank Daly, Joe Daniels, Joe Frank, Bob Kercher, Al Lujack, Joe McFadden, Frank Meglen, Jack Spencer, Dominic Montanaro, and Jim Reichey.

War Strands 128 Pax Romana Delegates in U. S.

New York, Sept. 6.—The officials of the International Catholic Student Congress of Pax Romana at Fordham University, in an appeal to the Department of State today, said the outbreak of war had made it impossible for 128 Europeans to return to their countries. Every thing "humanly possible" had been tried, they reported.

The convention officials said their problem would become critical Saturday, the day after the convention closes. On that day the 140 foreigners, South Americans as well as Europeans, must leave the dormitories they have been occupying to make way for returning boarding students.

Economy Plea Opens Budget Hearing Today

Prettyman to Speak; Inquiry Expected to Be Limited to One Day

Spokesmen for 26 civic and trade organizations are scheduled to tell the Commissioners today what they think of the municipal departmental estimates for the next fiscal year. The hearing opens at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building.

Due to the small number of requests that have been made for time, indications were that the hearing will be concluded in one day instead of being extended over two days as projected.

Meanwhile, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan is preparing a financial forecast of expected District revenues for this year and next so that the Commissioners will know how far they may go in recommending 1941 appropriations to the Budget Bureau and Congress.

Plea for Economy Expected

The hearing will open with a plea for economy from the Board of Trade. E. Barrett Prettyman, chairman of the municipal finance committee, is scheduled to speak for the board and is expected to issue a warning against new taxes.

L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, will follow, after which a score of other civic and trade representatives will be heard.

The Commissioners will begin trimming the budgetary estimates close to the present $48,000,000 early next week.

Trio Jailed In Death of U. S. Worker

2 Men, Woman Ordered Held For Grand Jury By Coroner's Panel

Two men and a woman were ordered held for the grand jury by a coroner's jury yesterday in the death of John Joseph Purcell, 50, of Mount Rainier, Md., a carpenter at the General Accounting Office.

The three, Nellie Harlow, alias Nellie Harris, 28, of 400 block G street northwest; Herbert Harris, 34, of Lynchburg, Va., and his brother, John J. Harris, 25, of the G street address, were remanded to jail.

Purcell was found unconscious, according to testimony, in the apartment of Miss Harris, early August 28. He died at Casualty Hospital of head and internal injuries September 1 without regaining consciousness. The autopsy report of Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, showed that Purcell suffered a ruptured liver, fractured ribs, crushed nose and concussion.

Miss Harlow told the jury she was resting in her second-floor room when Purcell entered. She said he asked for a girl named "Trixie" and when she told him she was not there he slapped her face.

"I slapped him back," the witness declared. "He then grabbed me around the throat and said 'I'm going to kill you.'" Miss Harlow continued. She then lost consciousness, she said.

Detective Sergt. William J. Liverman testified that he arrested John J. Harris, who, he said, admitted striking Purcell when he found Miss Harlow on the floor, after hearing her screams.

A broken cane found in the room with Purcell's body was identified as belonging to Herbert Harris. Several witnesses said Herbert was in the house at the time and others said they did not see him.

Claude Foster, of 705 Sixth street northwest, said he ran from Pension Park to the house after hearing screams and that he saw Herbert Harris over the body with the cane in his hand. He said he did not see blows struck.

Nondrivers Urged To Study Traffic Rules of District

Pedestrians who do not drive automobiles were urged last night to study traffic regulations by Edwin S. Hege, chairman of the Safety Promotion Committee of the Traffic Advisory Council, in an address before the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia.

Hege pointed out that while pedestrians account for seven per cent of all traffic deaths and 50 per cent of all traffic injuries, nine out of every ten pedestrians killed on the streets are non-drivers. He advanced as an explanation the fact that drivers are required to know "the purposes of signals and signs."

Of all pedestrian fatalities 44 per cent result from failure to use crosswalks, and nine per cent from crossing at crosswalks in disregard of signs or signals, he declared.

"Safety is perhaps a state of mind," he suggested, pointing out "that persons who weigh the probable consequences of almost every contemplated action are . . . comparatively free from all accidents, in traffic as well as in their homes."

Peace Reigns in Pedersen Home, Divorce Dropped

Mr. and Mrs. Aksel Pedersen, of 3337 Rittenhouse street northwest, informed the District court that they were reconciled and wanted to drop the divorce litigation which they fought through the Court of Appeals.

The appellate court recently won wide attention by its decision that Mrs. Pedersen was entitled to temporary alimony despite the fact that she and her husband lived in the same house while their lawyers were fighting out her limited divorce action in District court. Ordering an increase in the $3 a week previously given Mrs. Pedersen, the higher court remanded the case to District court for final judgement.

Pederson, a patent lawyer, and his wife, however, notified the justices yesterday that they wanted to call the whole thing off.

Rhythm, Safety Emphasized In Takoma Pool Aquatic Revue

Funnymen of the Takoma aquacade last night were (left to right) "Bud Dering, Kiser Cranford, Bill Tarbett and Henry Rinck. They did everything but run the water out of the pool and then dive in it

Dancing, swimming and lessons in safety were mixed up in a novel aquatic revue that entertained 6,000 spectators last night at the Takoma Pool. More than 200 of Washington's best swimmers took part in the affair, which was staged by the District of Columbia Red Cross and the Welfare Recreation Association.

Mrs. June Booth Stan, wearing a swimming suit presented to her by Eleanor Holm, shared with Elmer Hipsley in an exhibition of tandem swimming. The "swimming chorus" weaved across the pool in ballet formation, and dancers from the Madeline Smithson Hodgson Studio went through chorus routines beside the pool, accompanied by the Washington Gaslight Band.

Honor guests at the affair were Gen. Alexander Osinski, president of the Polish Red Cross, and Mlle. Anna Paszkowska, secretary general, who arrived in Washington yesterday.

Lessons in water safety and how to handle canoes and surf boards were given under the direction of Audrey Bogley, while police from the Metropolitan Police Training School and nurses from Providence Hospital gave demonstrations in water preparedness.

Johnnie Marshall, Billie Talbert, Patsy Palmer and Joe Lyman did staunt dives, and pool guards demonstrated life saving methods under the direction of Robert H. Duncan, Red Cross life saving instructor. Duncan was assisted in supervising the performance by Robert J. McCarthy, general manager of the Welfare and Recreation Association.

Capital News In Brief

Citizens to Meet

The National Gateway Citizens Association, also known as the Bladensburg Road Citizens Association, will hold its first meeting of the year Monday, when committee chairmen will be announced.

Cutpurse a Marked Man

A colored pocketbook snatcher got away with $52 last night, but not before becoming a marked man. His victim, Mrs. Ida Crowdbridge, Agriculture Department employe, of 2006 Addison Chapel road, Seat Pleasant, Md., dug deep in his face with her nails before she gave up her purse. The incident occurred while Mrs. Crowbridge was walking home from a street car stop at Eastern avenue and Minnesota avenue northeast.

A dollar less was the prize of three white boys, who snatched a purse containing $51 from Mrs. Nellie Price, 60, of 6312 Ninth street northwest, while she was walking in the 700 block of Van Buren street northwest yesterday.

Man, Gun Equal $5 Loss

Joseph Boenski, of 316 Ninth street northwest, told police last night he had been relieved of $5 by a colored man with a gun at the Q street bridge.

Howard U. Watchman Robbed of $10, Pants

Kenneth Turner, of 567 Twenty-third place northeast, a watchman at Howard University, told police last night he had been held up on the university grounds by two colored men and robbed of $10.65 and a pair of gray trousers.

Hazen Backs P.U.C. Rule Over Milk

Declares Sending D. C. Inspectors to Mid-West Farms Is Too Expensive

Commissioner Hazen yesterday favored giving control of the local dairy industry to the Public Utilities Commission as he prepared a recommendation to the board to reject the request of the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy that District inspectors be sent to Ohio farms.

Hazen said he had discussed the transfer of administration with Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the utilities commission, and that Keech had indorsed the plan.

Such a change could be accomplished, however, only by authority of Congress through amendment or replacement of the 1925 milk act.

Proposed Last Spring

Hazen said he believed that the commission could do the job with the addition of only a few employes.

Supervision of the dairy industry as a public utility was proposed to Congress last spring in the District milk investigation by Dr. Frederick C. Howe, former consumers' counsel, and was approved in principle by members of the Bates sub-committee.

Chairman Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, suggested a similar plan, except that it provided for establishing a milk commission to administer the act.

Were the Public Utilities Commission to assume supervision of the dairy industry, it presumbaly would fix the rates to be charged consumers and to be paid farmers.

Saw No Need for Ruling

Hazen, in recommending the board reject the request that inspectors be sent into the Midwest, said the District has neither the inspectors nor the funds to pay for such an undertakig.

Although the Health Department asked that the corporation counsel draw up a legal opinion on the proposal, Hazen said he saw no necessity for such a ruling. He said he believed the plan would be legal if the District had the facilities to make the inspections.

James J. Ward, jr., president of Embassy-Fairfax, and B. B. Derrick, secretary of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, were at the District Building yesterday conferring with officials about the matter.

Aussie Netmen To Play in Nat'l Singles

Cup Winners Allowed To Compete as Prize For Victory Monday

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 6.—As a reward for winning the Davis Cup, members of the Australian team have received last-minute permission to play in the Nationals Singles Tennis championships starting tomorrow at Forest Hills.

The Australian Association previously had ordered the quartet of Adrian Quist, Jack Bromwich, Jack Crawford and Harry Hopman to return home at once, but relented today and told the boys the war could wait until they had played out their string.

As a result, the Aussies might take two big chunks of silverware with them when they finally sail back through the prowling submarines on October 10. Quist and Bromwich will be equal favorites with Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Ferenc Puncec, of Yugoslavia, to survive the field of 85 that starts plastering the ball tomorrow.

Riggs, the Wimbledon champion, defeated Bromwich and lost to Quist in the Davis Cup challenge round at Merion. The three are as closely matched as billiard balls. Puncec, who recently scored a decisive victory over Bromwich at Newport, is accounted the dark horse of the tournament.

Miss Marble Favored

There's no girl in sight to take the women's title away from Alice Marble. The California blonde dominates the field as completely as ever Helen Wills Moody or Suzanne Lenglen did before her. Her closest competition promises to come from her two countrywomen, Helen Jacobs and Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, and the lefthanded English girl, Kay Stammers. Mme. Simone Mathieu, of France, the second seeded foreign entry, has withdrawn from the meet, as also have Jacques Brugnon and Bernard Destremau from the men's division.

Tomorrow's outstanding first-round match brings together Puncec and Frank Guernsey, jr., of Orlando, Fla., the two-time intercollegiate champion. Ernest Sutter, of New Orleans, plays Franjo Kukuljevic, of Yugoslavia, in another good one. The other seeded players have nothing to worry about in the initial shake-down. Riggs, Quist and Bromwich all drew byes into the second round.

22d Infantry Sergeant New Rifle Champion

By the Associated Press

Camp Perry, Ohio, Sept. 6.—Sergt. Coats M. Brown, of the Twenty-second Infantry, stationed at Fort McClellan, Ala., ended the four-year reign of the United States Marines today by winning the National individual service rifle championship at the Camp Perry matches.

The 28-year-old doughboy from Myrtlewood, Ala., beat 2,027 of the country's top notch .30 caliber marksmen as he racked up a score of 288 of 300 in the five stage title competition.

Brown scored 42 of 50 at 200 yards standing; 49 of 50 at 200 yards, prone, rapid rifle; 50 of 50 at both 300 yards sitting and 600 yards prone, and then hopped up with 97 of 100 in today's tough 1,000-yard prone stage.

Gunnery Sergt. Claude N. Harris of the Marines, stationed at Lancaster, S. C., missed a chance to because of the smaller count at win the title twice when he skidded on his last two shots.

At the end of the first four stages he was tied for the lead, but he finished today's long-range event with 95 of 100 to score 288, tying Brown's score but being outranked because of the smalled count at 1,000 yards. Harris won the shoot in 1935.

Another Marine, Corp. Thomas R. Mitchell, of Ropeville, Tex., was third with 286 points. Other leaders: Richard Jones, Buffalo, N. Y., civilian, 285; Sergt. Edward V. Seeser, Portland, Oreg., Marine, 284; Sergt. Lynn H. Clement, Infantry, Fort Benning, Ga., 283; Lieut. Matt H. Frithe, Socorro, N. M., National Guard, 282; Corp. Chester E. Hodkins, Manchester, Conn., National Guard, 282; Lieut. Charles F. Harrison, Cavalry, Fort Clark, Tex., 281, and Hjalmer J. Erickson, Portland Oreg., C. M. T. C., 281.

Magruder Wins Senior Crown

Baltimore, Sept. 6.—Warren K. Magruder, once a top-ranking tennis player at the Baltimore Country Club, and now a golfer at the same club, captured the senior championship of the Maryland State Golf Association today at the Green Spring Valley Hunt Club.

His card of 82 led the field by a wide margin. His closest competition came from F. D. Hubbell, of Rolling Road, and W. A. Patrick, of Baltimore Country Club, who tied for second gross with 87 each. They will play off for the prize later. B. Warren Corkran, of Elkridge Hunt Club, defending champion, trailed with a score of 88.

Low net honors went to I. L. Kander, of Green Spring Valley, with an 88-18—70; Walter Scott, of Baltimore Country Club, came in second in the net division, with 94-22—72. Third low net produced a tie between Lee Temple, of Rodgers Forge, with 89-16—73, and J. T. Carroll, Baltimore Country Club, 90-17—73.

Scores of Washingtonians: Dr. Noah Pomeroy, Congressional Club, 89-13—76. Jack McCarron, Congressional Club, 88-7—81. No card was turned in by Dr. R. A. Keilty, Congressional Club.

Dusek Hating May Set New High Tonight

Jack Hader and Ernie Dusek will meet tonight under the lights at Griffith stadium in the 90-minute feature exhibition on a card which brings together Ernie's brother, Emil and Nanjo Singh, the cobra clutch exponent, in a special preliminary match.

Vanquished before a record crowd of wrestling fans at the stadium last week, Nanjo will seek vengeance on his conqueror's brother—who has been wronged heretofore by only being referred to as Ernie's cousin.

Singh claims he was "given a dirty deal" last week and insists he will "clean out the Dusek boys one by one—beginning tonight." Hader, who has worked up a nice hate for Ernie, says no to Nanjo and begs that he be allowed to wipe out the Dusek lads.

The supporting card, opening at 8:30 p. m., brings together Bob Wagner and Rosy Red Ryan; Abie Coleman and Ralph Garibaldi; Ed Newman and Alan Eustace.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

Paris, Sept. 6.—Bourse dealings were sluggish today as the market continued under restrictions. International and gold shares moved ahead, but the general undertone was heavy. Rentes closed 135 centimes lower to 180 up. Officials said present plans call for continuation of trading.

Amsterdam—Prices in the bourse were on the whole buoyant today, although there were a handful of holdouts to the main trend. Interest centered on sugar, rubber, shipping and American shares. Royal Dutch was also a strong spot. Bank shares, government loans and certain industrials weakened.

Liverpool—Cotton futures closed nominally unchanged today. Activity was at a minimum owing to government restrictions on price movements.

London—The stock exchange will reopen for business tomorrow, September 7.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 6 (F). (United States Department of Agriculture)—Excited buying in the Boston wool market today has resulted in further advances in prices of domestic wools and many houses have withdrawn offerings entirely, while others have adhered to a policy of selling limited quantities at rising prices. Sales confirmed in territory wools included graded average French combing lengths and original good French combing, both at 78@80 cents, scoured basis; graded French combing half-blood at 75 cents, scoured basis, and combing ¾-blood territory wools at 72 cents, scoured basis. Graded bright fleeces have been sold at 32@33 cents in the grease for fine delaine; 33 cents for combing half blood; 35@37 for combing three-eighths blood and 35 cents for quarter-blood graded lines. Volume of most sales was moderate because of restricted offerings. Late asking prices were mostly above sales up to the close in cases where wools were being offered.

*X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1939 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

"It's me, Goldie Ahearn, but don't hang up," said the voice on the other end of the phone. There was a trace of naive appeal in his tone.

"My friend, I want you should put something in the paper for me," the Voice continued. "Tell the pipple about my fight Monday night—the big fight I am giving them between Harry Jeffra and Chole Archibald for the world title, understand? They know about Archibald. Tell 'em about Jeffra, and the wunnerful tradition about little men from Baltimore."

POVICH

All right. We have it straight from Goldie Ahearn that it is indeed a glorious tradition that Harry Jeffra will carry into the ring against Archibald on Monday evening. He is the latest of a long line of little men from Baltimore who have battered their way into championship notice in the lighter classes of pugilism.

Baltimore has never had a heavyweight fighter of any account, nor even a light-heavy, but somehow the city at the other end of the Washington boulevard has always come up with a champion or near-champ in the lighter divisions. Ever since the little Negro, Joe Gans, came out of the slaughter-house district of Baltimore in 1904 to lick Frankie Erne for the world lightweight crown, the city has been a consistent incubator of talent.

Until Benny Leonard came along there never was any argument on the score of who was the greatest lightweight champion in history. And there are die-hards who will never admit that Leonard rates with the little Baltimore Negro who went 80 rounds with Battling Nelson in their three famous fights.

They Were Real Fight Managers

Al Herfort was the manager of Gans, and the dean of Baltimore fight managers who have achieved fame with their fistic discoveries. A pupil of Herfort was Sam Harris, who later unearthed Baltimore's first bantamweight champion of the world, Kid Williams.

They were fight managers back in the days when a fighter's manager was actually that. Unlike the present-day manager whose chief asset is his ability to pull political strings and book bouts for his man, the Herfort-Harris school of fight pilots were not above going into the ring with their man, teaching him the rudiments of the fistic art and at the end of the workout personally administering the rub-down. They were closer to their men than the managerial front men of modern boxing, the great bulk of whom have never had a glove tied on their hands.

Kid Williams was a Danish lad, typically blond, and a worthy successor to Gans as Baltimore's proud fistic boast. Harris maneuvered him into a bout with Bantamweight Champion Johnny Coulon at Vernon, Calif., in 1914 and the baby-faced Williams belied his innocent countenance by rushing Coulon off his feet and winning the title in three rounds.

Hanging around Harris' stable of fighters 25 years ago was a little Jewish lad named Max Waxman and he became well grounded in the Herfort-Harris technique of digging up fight talent. Waxman blossomed as a manager in his own right and was a silent partner in Harris' stable which included such near-champs as K. O. Chaney, Danny Frush and Frankie Rice.

Waxman all but won a featherweight title with a Baltimore Polish lad named Andy Chaney, no relation to Irish K. O. Chaney. Waxman's Chaney beat Featherweight Champion Johnny Kilbane three times in overweight bouts but could never entice Kilbane into the ring with the title at stake.

He Didn't Miss With His Man Dundee

He failed also to win a title with Little Jeff, the sawed-off flyweight, but Little Jeff for a considerable time was ranked No. 2 in the flyweight division. But when he turned to the welterweight class, Waxman didn't miss. He piloted Joe Dundee into the championship and when Dundee finally lost his title to Jackie Fields at Detroit, Waxman turned to his beaten champ's brother, Vince Dundee, a middleweight, and produced another champion.

Early in the 1920's, Baltimore produced another near-champ in Mexican Bobby Garcia, a soldier stationed in the city. Garcia, with his ceaseless punching, was the Henry Armstrong of his day, and the Voice yesterday was saying: "Garcia is the only fighter I ever saw who could fight Armstrong at his own game of banging away with his head down, and beat him. Garcia would have licked Armstrong. He could set a faster pace and he could punch harder."

There were a few lean years for Waxman after Vince Dundee passed out as the middleweight champion, but they were not many. He discovered a little golf caddy of Italian-Irish parentage who was gaining something of a local reputation as a tough kid fighter. Waxman put him in ring togs and two years later saw him win the bantamweight championship of the world. That lad was Harry Jeffra, whom Waxman is sending after the featherweight title Monday night.

Two factors hastened Jeffra's exit from the 118-pound bantamweight ranks. His jaw was broken by Sixto Escobar the night he lost the title to Escobar in Puerto Rico, and he had weakened himself by making the weight.

"I'll never blame Jeffra for losing that title to Escobar," Waxman was saying yesterday. "The climate in Puerto Rico was enough to stop anybody. In the hot weather down there the meat is half-baked before they slaughter the cow, and a fellow has to learn how to drink their water. Jeffra's jaw was broken in the fourth round that night and Jack Dempsey, who was the referee, asked Harry if he wanted the fight sotpped. Harry told Dempsey, 'If you're my friend, you won't stop it.' He boxed the last 11 rounds with a broken jaw and lost a thin decision."

He ought to do all right against Archibald.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 6.—If Germany doesn't win the Davis Cup, by capturing or torpedoing the S. S. Monterey, on which vessel the victorious Australians will return the old sterling pot to the far-off continent, the cup should stay there at least five years.

It will stay there as long as the war keeps going, for sure, because there will be no such international tennis until the boys sit around a conference table and divvy up what's left of the world's real estate. But even if the war ends with a quick kayo, Australia is odds-on to hold the chilly chalice against any American onslaught for a long time to come.

CONSIDINE

The big advantage the Anzacs now have is that they will defend the cup on their home grounds, with their particular kind of tennis balls, in the middle of what is their summer—but will be our winter. They won't have to go through the weakening process of traveling half-way around the earth to challenge for the glittering gaboon and they won't have to fight their way through preliminary opponents. They're the well-ensconced big shots now with plenty of protection.

Bromwich Will Improve on Home Soil

Bromwich is only 20, still short of his prime, and will be a much better tennis player in Australia than he has been here—for the bloke is very sensitive to the least partisanship on the part of foreign galleries. Besides, he has never been physically fit in this country, as may be understood from the fact that he beat Quist—who looked better than he did during the recent cup-lifting—in straights sets for the Australian title.

Unless he is claimed by war, Bromwich should be either the best or close to the best player in the game for another ten years, for his style of play takes nothing out of him except an occasional bead of sweat.

Three very good American teams of 25 and more years ago tried to lift the cup during one of its prolonged stays in Australia, but failed for all these extra-curricular reasons. They played tennis, but the exhausting trip, the strange conditions, the change in food and water and courts and conditions, blended with the fact that Australia at that time had Brookes and Wilding, proved much too much for the American invaders.

It Took Six Years the Last Time

The first World War caused the cup to remain in Australia from 1914 until the beginning of the fabulous twenties. And when America took it back in 1920 it took the tremendous team of Tilden and Johnston, the greatest team we ever had, to turn the trick.

Now we must develop almost a new team. Riggs is good enough to be retained, for the time being, but whenever the cup is brought back you can be sure that it will be done by one of those slambang sluggers like Budge. From here it looks as if those two lean California kids, Jack Kramer and Welby Van Horn, will eventually fit the role, but they are two or three years away, assuming that they'll continue to improve.

Frankie Parker, though young enough and game enough to fit into future American Davis Cup teams, is woefully inadequate. With a forehand drive and a service so weak as to be comical, he surrenders as unarmed as Lepke. An American doubles team also will have to be developed and that is a Homeric task for, chemically, we are bad doubles players. It is an art in itself, so distinct from singles as to be a different sport.

Knuckle Ball Artist Wins 4th Straight; Bloodworth Slams Out Homer With Man On

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Sept. 6. — Dutch Leonard was serving nothing more than one-base hits this afternoon and behind his knuckle ball the Washington Nats advanced to their fourth straight victory — a 6-3 triumph over the Athletics.

Connie Mack, watching his A's in action for the first time since he was stricken ill in June, saw his chattels held to nine hits by Leonard, who was achieving his seventeenth victory of the season.

The Nats required only five innings today to knock Bill Beckman from the box in their first start against the 32-year-old rookie since he shut them out at Griffith Stadium last week. A pinch hitter was sent into the game for Beckman after the Nats had compiled a 4-1 lead.

A's Rallied in Ninth

Highlights of the Nats' 11-hit attack were Jimmy Bloodworth's seventh-inning home run off Bob Joyce with a man on base, George Case's fifty-first stolen base of the season, Buddy Lewis' fifteenth triple of the year, and a harmless-looking pop fly by Buddy Lewis which Second Baseman Bill Nagel muffed for an error that sent two runs across the plate.

Leonard pitched 6-hit ball for eight innings, holding the A's to a single run. In the ninth, three Philadelphia singles reduced the score to a respectable margin.

Buddy Lewis, the league's leader in the making of three-base hits, inspired the first Washington run of the game when he tripled to centerfield with one out in the first inning. He scored immediately, when West grounded out to Nagel. Singles by Wright and Travis later in the inning were wasted.

Leonard himself encouraged two runs by the Nats in the second inning when he doubled down the leftfield line with two out. After Case drew a walk, the Nats were presented with a pair of unearned runs, Nagel dropping Lewis' high pop over the infield which took so long to descend that Case followed Leonard across the plate.

Miles Came Through

Case's speed was the main factor in the Nats' fourth-inning run. With one out he beat out a hit to deep short and then promptly stole second despite Beckman's efforts to keep him close to the bag with frequent throws to first. From second base, West scored Case with a single to center.

A pinch hitter, Dee Miles, fetched the A's their first run of the game. It happened in the fifth after Nagel led off with a single. With two out, one of Leonard's pitches got away from Ferrell for a passed ball, and with the run in scoring position Miles batted for Beckman and delivered a single to center.

Leonard encountered a flurry of trouble in the ninth, but held the damage to two runs. Nagel singled to left and Chapman doubled to right before Leonard could get anybody out. Nagel scored from third on Lodigiani's fly to Wright and Dean followed with a single to right that scored Chapman. Moses fouled to Lewis for the second out, but the A's got a brief reprieve when Gantenbein's grounder was fumbled by Bloodworth. Bob Johnson hit into a force play at third for the game-ending out.

Giants Beat Boston, 10 to 4; Fifth Straight

Posedel, Barnicle Driven From Mound by 16-Hit Attack on Fumbling Bees

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 6.—The Giants stretched their winning streak to five games today with a 10-to-4 conquest of the stingless Boston Bees.

New York pounded Bill Posedel and George Barnicle, rookie right-hander just up from Hartford, for 16 hits and also had the advantage of four Boston blunders. A four-run cluster in the fourth broke a 3-3 tie and put the game on ice.

York's 2-Run Homer Beats Cleveland, 2-0

McKain, of Tigers, Outpitched but Wins On Circuit in 4th

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 6.—Al Milnar held Detroit to five hits in a southpaw pitching duel today, but one of them was Rudy York's fourteenth homer with Charlie Gehringer on base. The Tigers beat Cleveland, 2 to 0, to go into a virtual fourth-place tie with the Indians.

Except in the seventh, Archie McKain kept Cleveland's nine hits scattered to no more than one each inning. Rollie Hemsley and Lou Boudreau singled in the seventh and Bruce Campbell walked, filling the bases with one out, but Ben Chapman grounded into a double play.

DiMag Settles Mound Duel With 26th Homer

Jittery Bosox Commit Four Errors as Yanks Boost Lead A Full Game; Gomez Wins 12th

New York, Sept. 6.—Joe Di Maggio's twenty-sixth home run of the season broke up a pitching duel between Lefty Bob Grove and Lefty Vernon Gomez today and gave the world champion Yankees a 2-to-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The outcome increased New York's American League lead a full notch to 15½ games.

The jittery Red Sox committed four errors and one of them by Grove himself let in New York's first run in the third inning. A high throw by Manager Joe Cronin let Babe Dahlgren reach first. He was forced by Gomez, who reached third on Frank Crosetti's single. Then Red Rolfe hit to Grove, who threw into centerfield seeking a double play.

The Red Sox clustered three of these, all singles, for their only run in the third.

3 Rookies Report To Bucky Harris From Greenville

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.—Three products of the Nats' farm at Greenville, S. C., in the Sally League, are due to join the Washington club here tonight. They are Outfielder Alex Pitko, Pitcher Louis Thuman and Infielder Hal Quick.

Pitko is believed to be the prize acquisition of the lot. He is a husky lad who has impressed Washington scouts with his hitting ability despite his crudeness. Thuman, a right-hander, received a tryout with the Nats last spring. As a relief pitcher, he may be the first of the trio to break into the Nats' lineup.

Browns Get Wade On Waivers

Boston, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox announced today the release of Pitcher Jake Wade on waivers to the St. Louis American League Club.

Wade, who came to the Boston Club from Detroit at the beginning of the season, has won one game and lost four. He is a lefthander.

Five Errors Help Bucs Win Opener

Redlegs Drop First, 5-4, and Steady to Take Nightcap, 4-3; Lead by 5½ Games

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 6.—Recovering from a jittery start in which they made five errors, the league leading Cincinnati Reds managed to split a double-header with Pittsburgh today and increase their lead on the faltering St. Louis Cards to five and one-half games.

The Pirates scored four runs on miscues by the Reds to win the first contest in 11 innings, 5 to 4. Cincinnati took the second game, 4 to 3, when Billy Werber's easy grounder to short took a bad hop in the tenth inning and went for a double, scoring Billy Myers from second.

The Cardinals lost to the Cubs, 11-3.

After Catcher Willard McKee Hershberger dropped Paul Waner's pop foul in the first inning of the opening game, Waner and Arky Vaughan singled, Johnny Rizzo walked, Elbie Fletcher doubled and Lee Handley singled to score three runs. Cincinnati had scored one in the first and added three in the third.

Chuck Klein, pinch-hitting in the ninth for Pittsburgh, doubled and scored on Paul Waner's infield single and a wild throw by Lonnie Frey to tie up the game.

Cubs Blast Cards, 11-3; Gain on Redbirds

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Chicago's Cubs advanced within two and a half games of the second place St. Louis Cardinals today, using four home runs and steady pitching by Larry French to triumph 11 to 3 over the Red Birds in the series opener.

Curt Davis, former Cub, bidding for his twentieth victory, was blasted from the box under a barrage of three home runs in the third inning after two errors had helped the Cubs to a 3 to 0 lead in the first inning.

Bill Nicholson, Rip Russell and French hit for the circuit in the third, French with one on base. Billy Herman collected the other homer in the fifth.

Dead Heats Mark Seventh and Eighth Races at Timonium

Don Hamer Prominent in Both Events

Deepwick Drives Up, Collars Schley Buck; Tiring Gracky Caught By Cora Kay's Rush

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Timonium, Md., Sept. 6.—For the first time in Maryland racing history dead heats were run in successive races here today. In the seventh and eighth events, the judges were unable to separate two horses and the "even-Stephen" sign was hung out. In both instances the backers of the horses seemed to be satisfied that half a loaf was better than not a crumb.

The races were identical in that in each case a horse went to the front only to be caught on the wire. Another oddity was the fact that each race involved a horse slightly under 4 to 1 and another slightly over 7 to 1.

Apprentice Jockey Ralph Hamer figured in both dead heats. In the seventh race, he was astride Schley Buck when the horse was caught on the wire by Deepwick while in the eighth race, he had the mount on Gracky when Cora Kay drove up to make it a split decision.

Schley Buck in Front

The seventh race was a two-horse affair from the start to finish between A. S. Bowman's Schley Buck and W. B. Johnson's Deepwick. Hamer sent Schley Buck to the front, saved a lot of ground but the boy did not appear to be getting the most out of his charge at the end and Deepwick came with a gallant bid under Jockey E. Johnson's handling to be up in the final jump.

The eighth race found Hamer taking Gracky to the front at once. The filly, owned by E. A. Jones, had a hard time shaking off Huppy but drew out to a good lead entering the stretch. However, Jim White's Cora Kay came from far back with a drive that Gracky, a tiring filly, could not resist. Jockey Woodrow Kirk rode Cora Kay.

More Money to Place

In both races, the winning mutuel was split two ways and each instance brought more money to place than to win on one of the horses that figured.

In the seventh race Schley Buck paid $4.90, $4.60 and $2.90 with Deepwick bringing $7.50, $9.10 and $4. In the eighth race Gracky paid $5.30, $4.70 and $3.90 to $7.50, $11.50 and 5.40 for Cora Kay.

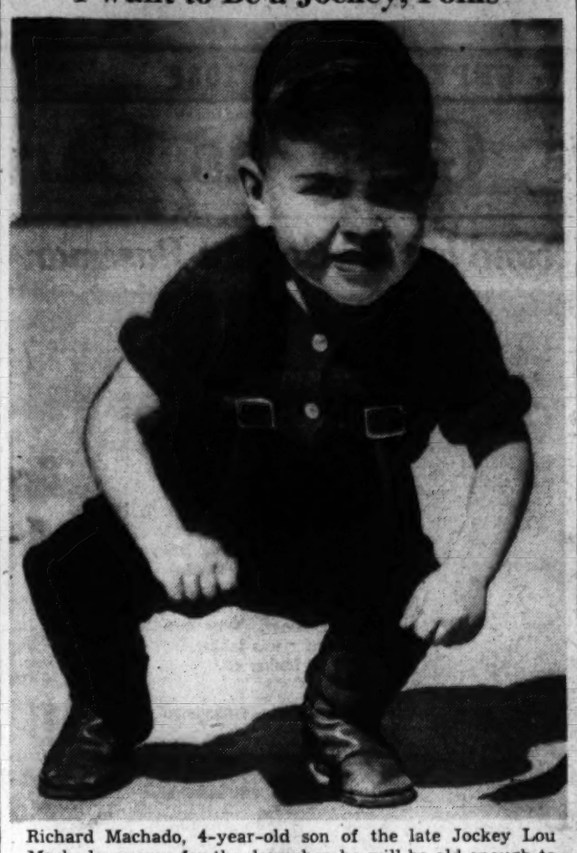
I Want to Be a Jockey, Folks



Richard Machado, 4-year-old son of the late Jockey Lou Machado, yearns for the day when he will be old enough to start a saddle career. A mascot of horsemen, jockeys and officials around the Maryland tracks, little Richard is shown above as he demonstrates approved jockey form on an imaginary horse Photo by Joe Fleischer.

The latter, permitted to go wide from the start, fell back in the first 5 furlongs, then closed with a belated rush. SUN ALV was made too much use of getting to the front and failed to rally. NOBLE SCOT set a fast pace, saved second all the way and fought it out determinedly. BALKANESE, shuffled back after the start, found racing room on the inside to gain a contending position and continued gamely to the end.

Andy Oliveri, Neil Turner, Feature Public Links Match Play

Both Under Par in First Two Rounds

Julian Williams, W. W. Seay, Murphy Saunders Also Reach Third Round

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Andy Oliveri, the defending champion and prohibitive favorite, and Neil Turner, a 23-year-old Government clerk who hasn't played a half-dozen rounds this year, were the first and second round sensations of the city public links championship yesterday at East Potomac.

Oliveri was six under par for 16 holes in the morning, and finished with a 68, as he defeated Bob McDonald, 7 and 5. In the afternoon he was off his previous form but scrambled around in one over par to score 4 and 3 over Ken Zent. He took off his shoes and socks, waded into a trap and knocked the ball next to the cup on the second nine for one of his unorthodox pars.

Turner, playing with borrowed clubs and shoes when his brother failed to show up with his regular implements, proceeded to knock in three birdies on the second nine of his match with Steve Fuller, and win 2 and 1. In the afternoon he played 15 holes in sub-par figures to defeat Bob Ralford, 4 and 3.

Williams Wins Two

Julian "Georgia" Williams, a former caddy and now a shoe-salesman, pulled two upsets in succession to gain a quarter-final berth. In the first round he defeated Alfred Shorb, 1 up, on the remnants of a 3-up lead at the fifteenth hole, and in the afternoon he lost another lead late in the match but caught East Potomac Medalist Charles Alexander on the twentieth hole with a par.

W. W. Seay, medalist at Anacostia and the favorite to meet Oliveri in the semifinals this afternoon, defeated 16-year-old Perry Foust, 2 and 1, and then scored 3 and 2 over B. Campbell, a narcotic squad agent, after trailing by two holes at the ninth.

Ralph Grimes, a motion picture operator, won by default and then upset Joe Micker on the twentieth hole, in one of the biggest surprises of the day, while K. M. Skaggs accounted for Bill Leapley, 1 up, and then turned on the heat against comedalist Jack Sinclair on the second nine to win, 4 and 2.

Saunders Victor

Harry Saunders, six-time horseshoe pitching champion of the city, defeated Anacostia's hope, Calvin Loying, 1 up, in the first round and Charles Sullivan, 4 and 3, in the second. Sullivan beat one of Rock Creek's medalists, C. G. Boucher, 7 and 6, in the morning.

Julian Murphy, Maryland University linksman, completed the bracket of 8 by finishing a total of 10 up on W. H. Morley and William Walsmith in his two matches.

Feature of this morning's matches will be Turner against Saunders, while the highlight of the upper bracket finds Oliveri opposing Grimes. Should Williams, Oliveri, Murphy and Turner win their matches, the semifinal round would be filled with four former caddies, but it is unlikely that they all will win.

Two matches were defaulted in the first round, for various reasons, one when a sand and gravel company strike was called off, and another due to sickness in the family.

First Round

Charles Alexander won over Earl Marsey by default; Julian Williams defeated Alfred Shorb, 1 up; B. Campbell defeated Frank Clark, 3 and 2; W. W. Seay defeated Perry Foust, 2 and 1; Andy Oliveri defeated Bob McDonald, 7 and 5; Ken Zent defeated Athol Ellis, 3 and 2; Ralph Grimes defeated John Andestead, default; Joe Micker defeated Bill Leapley, 2 and 1; K. M. Skaggs defeated William Leapley, 1 up; Jack Sinclair defeated Tracy Foust, 6 and 5; William Walsmith defeated E. Hauser, 1 up; Julian Murphy defeated W. H. Morley, 4 and 3; Harry Saunders defeated Calvin Loving, 1 up; Charles Sullivan defeated R. J. Boucher, 7 and 6; Robert Ralford defeated W. H. Dean, 2 and 1; Neil Turner defeated Steve Fuller, 2 and 1.

Second Round

Williams defeated Alexander, 1 up, 20 holes; Seay defeated Campbell, 3 and 2; Oliveri defeated Zent, 6 and 3; Grimes defeated Micker, 1 up, 20 holes; Skaggs defeated Sinclair, 4 and 2; Murphy defeated Walsmith, 6 and 5; Saunders defeated Sullivan, 4 and 3; Turner defeated Ralford, 4 and 3.

Pairings

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

WJSV Staff Baseball Announcer

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

Dutch Leonard nears the lead in the Nats' Man of the Month contest following his fourth straight pitching victory. Based on performances at Philadelphia yesterday, points were distributed as follows:

To Leonard, five points, because he held the A's to one run for eight innings and then quelled a rally in the ninth, and because he contributed a two-bagger to the Nat's attack.

To George Case, two points, because he beat out an infield hit, stole second and almost single-handedly brought the Nats a run.

Charley Gelbert	6	George Case	4
Dutch Leonard	5	Jimmy Bloodworth	4
Joe Krakauskas	5	Alex Alexandra	3
Ken Chase	4	Taft Wright	1
Buddy Lewis	4	Jimmy Wilson	1
Cecil Travis	3	Johnny Welaj	1
Bobby Estalella	3

Birmingham's Nine Favorite In Ball Tourney

The personal choice of "Sunny Jim" Downey, National Amateur Baseball Federation president, in the national tournament beginning Saturday at Griffith Stadium will probably be the Jordan Park nine, of Birmingham, Ala.

Jordan Park won its way into the tournament on Labor Day, trouncing its finals opponent, Ward Baking, by an easy 13-3 count. It happens that Downey also hails from Birmingham, and is one of the team's most rabid rooters. He will accompany it to Washington today.

The question of whether the defending champions in the tourney, Altes Lager team, would be entered or not was decided yesterday in Detroit, where the champs turned back their bitterest rivals, Vlasic & Co., in the deciding game of the playoffs. Tony Dugray, the same manager who guided his team to a sweep of the tourney in Pittsburgh last year, will be in charge.

Marion Brown Upset In Mason Dixon Play

Mrs. Betty Meckley Beats Ohio State Champion With Best Round of Tourney; Mrs. Schluderberg Wins Over Miss Brown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 6.—Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, Baltimore City champion, scored a major upset in the second round of the seventh annual Mason-Dixon tournament here today when she defeated Middle Atlantic Champion Marion Brown, from the Manor Club near Washington, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Schluderberg had nine 1-putt greens in the 16 holes of the match, and the District player could not match that brand of golf. Mrs. Berty Meckley thus was the sole hope of the District for the title when she scored an impressive triumph over Mrs. Linton Fallis, Ohio State champion from Toledo, 5 and 4. Mrs. Meckley's 78 was the lowest round of the event thus far. The Indian Spring player was out in 38 and 4 up, and held the margin on the back nine.

Mrs. Meckley meets Mrs. D. F. Manion, Oil City, Pa., who also scored an upset when she eliminated Mrs. Leon Solomon, of Memphis, Tenn.

Co-medalist and former champion Virginia Guilfoil, Syracuse, N. Y., defeated Mrs. E. W. Steifel, 6 and 4 while Mary Fine, Scranton, Miss., defeated Mrs. Sam Israel, jr., 3 and 2. Defending Champion Dorothy Traung scored, 3 and 2, over Mrs. J. H. Heim, Kane, Pa., and State Champion Ann Hoblitzell defeated Mrs. L. G. Keye, Prospect, Ky. Comedalist and Michigan State Champion Jean Kyer defeated Virginia Paddock, Detroit 7 and 6.

Other Washingtonians had good and bad luck. In the second flight Mrs. H. A. Knox triumphed over Mrs. S. N. Huffard, Bluefield, W. Va., 3 and 1. She meets Mrs C. M. Vanstory, of Greensboro, N. C., tomorrow. Mrs. John O. Tucker, Wheeling player, downed Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, Washington, 3 and 2. Third flight play advanced two Washingtonians, Mrs. H. L. Lacey, who won from a District player, Mrs. C. M. Hammersla, 4 and 3, and Mrs. W. H. Warren, who downed Mrs. A. C. Paul, 4 and 2.

In fourth flight, Mrs. O. D. Guilfoil, Syracuse, surprised by downing Washingtonian, Mrs. H. C. Cobb, 4 and 2, as another Washington player, Mrs. R. E. Burks, fell before shots of Mrs. J. W. Chapman, of Cleveland.

In two previous clashes this season, the District fire-eaters have been victorious twice, though neither time by a prohibitive score. The losses comprised Montclair's only defeats in the past two years.

Chisox Defeat Browns, 7 to 2; 14th to Rigney

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 6.—The Chicago White Sox beat the last place St. Louis Browns, 7 to 2, here today in the first game of a series of three.

The Browns registered only a half-dozen hits off John Rigney as he hung up his fourteenth win of the year.

The game drew only 435 customers.

Hurler Collapses As Local Teams Play 125 Innings

Lads of Taft-Burroughs Playground, divided into the "Night Owls" and the "Early Birds," turned the trick yesterday. They dragged themselves through 125 innings of play between 6 a. m. and 6:15 p. m., breaking the mark set last week by Roosevelt and Johnson-Powell athletes, who went 115 innings.

The "Night Owls" won, 125-105. Tommy Pollard was credited with the victory, though every man on the team saw mound duty. Pitcher Mague started for the losers, but gave way to Jack Boggs in the fifteenth inning. The latter went the remaining 110 innings, the result of his efforts being a complete collapse when darkness stopped proceedings.

Freak Golf Accident Seriously Injures Boy

New York, Sept. 6 (INS).—Injured in a freak golf accident, Alfred Freeman, 15, was taken to Fordham Hospital today after his golf ball hit a tree, bounced back, and struck him on the head. Bob Brownell Is Paired With N. J. Champion

Tees Off at 11:20 A. M. With Whitehead; Tries Amateur Links Today

Bobby Brownell, who is scheduled to play his first practice round today over the North Shore Country Club at Glenview, Ill., where the National Amateur Golf Championship starts next Monday, is paired with Charles Whitehead, New Jersey State champion, in the qualifying round, according to pairings of the United States Golf Association.

Brownell, the District's best bet for a good showing in the championship for several years, and Whitehead play at 11:20 Monday, and tentatively at 2:50 Tuesday. The latter is subject to change, as only the 130 low scores of the field of 170 will play Tuesday, in a new ruling.

Of the other four Middle Atlantic qualifiers, Otto Greiner, the medalist at Five Farms, drew the most prominent partner in Paul Leslie, a former intercollegiate champion, at 10:40 and 2:10 on the respective qualifying days.

Wynsol Spencer, the Virginia State champion, will play with Arthur Atkinson, jr., of Winged Foot, while Ernie Caldwell's partner is Joe Taylor, of Tampa, Fla. Baltimore's third qualifier, Spenser Overton, will play with James Scott, Louisville, Ky.

Johnny Burke, the former Intercollegiate titleholder from Georgetown, and District champion, is paired with Sam Ruswin, Milwaukee, Wis. George Voigt, the former local player and Walker Cup team member, withdrew from the tourney, and his place will be taken by T. Suffern Tailer.

Two of the more prominent twosomes include two former champions and 1932 finalists, Johnny Goodman and C. Ross Somerville, and another former champ, Johnny Fischer, and last year's finalist, B. Patrick Abbott. Another withdrawal was John Langley, British player from San Francisco, who was scheduled to qualify with defending champion Willie Turnesa. Marvin Ward, tourney favorite, and Frank Strafaci, are partners.

Three tied at net 71's for second place.

Optic May Trouble Joey in Title Fight Monday in Stadium

By Al Hailey

Harry Jeffra's chances of upsetting Joey Archibald and taking the world's featherweight championship away from him Monday night at Griffith Stadium were considerably heightened yesterday in two respects.

In the first place, the champion had to cut short his sparring session when an old cut over his left eye was reopened into a nasty tear that may give him trouble in the 15-round title fight.

And secondly, the Baltimore contender went through a highly impressive workout at Turner's Arena, displaying a potent righthand punch against which Archibald is said to be weak.

A Right Started It

Archibald had boxed three fast rounds with Billy Banks, local colored featherweight, and was in the second round of a session with Jim Montgomery, another colored fighter, when a right glanced off his chin and Montgomery's elbow caught him in the eye just under the edge of his head guard.

Joey stopped boxing immediately and went to his dressing room to have the cut examined. A physician looked at the cut eyelid and warned him not to do any more rough work while his trainer, Charlie Goldman, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn and Promoter Joe Turner stood by wringing their hands in fear lest Joey would be unable to fight.

The cut was an old one opened over Joey's eye by Mike Belloise a year ago and since pounded by other punchers. Simon Chavez, Venezuela fighter, opened it recently when he defeated Archibald in a nontitle fight in Venezuela.

Jeffra worked five rounds with sparring partners and appeared to be in top condition, despite reports that he is not in shape to give much fight after 10 rounds. Heinie Blaustein, Jeffra's trainer,

Gonzaga's Grid Call Brings 35

Coach Orrel Mitchell of Gonzaga High, got his first glimpse of his 1939 Purple grid team yesterday when 35 eager athletes, numbering five lettermen and at least 15 boys with some experience, reported for the first practice at Benning Field.

If Mitchell or Father Bahlman, new athletic director at Gonzaga, had any reason for early season worry, it was due to the lack of experienced backs on the squad. Back from the 1938 string of ball-carriers were only Fred Rice, Bob Mulvihill, Buddy O'Donnell, Jack Walsh, Healey and Simone. The remainder were lost through graduation.

In the line, however, a veritable horde of good players appeared for initial workouts. Dave Walsh, Bob O'Donnell, Garland, Hurson, Costell, Seiler, Harrington, Fitzgerald and Mulaney were listed among the carry-overs, and a number of promising new players were also present.

Social Club to Drill

A. B. Social Club's grid representatives will hold their first practice Sunday morning at 10 o'clock at Edgewood Playground. Coach Fred Baxter, former McKinley player, invites teams wishing games with the Socialites to call Manager Apperti at Dupont 9591.

Steel Exports And Prices Rise With Warfare

Only Lack of Vessels Hampers Shipments, Iron Age Declares

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 6.—War in Europe has stimulated sharply the export branch of the steel business, Iron Age said today in its weekly review.

"Steel export departments have been flooded with cables from all parts of the world seeking supplies here or urging a hastening of shipments of steel previously ordered," the magazine added. "Steel export prices have been advanced several dollars a ton, in most instances to a parity with domestic prices. Tin plate . . . has been sold at $6 a ton over recently quoted prices.

"A world-wide market is open to American producers without restriction, though shipments abroad may be hampered by a lack of sufficient ocean bottoms," the publication said, noting the export quota system and world export prices had gone by the board.

Auto Demand Increases

At the same time, "There is an increasing demand for steel from the automobile industry and miscellaneous consumers who appear anxious to protect themselves against shortages . . ."

Scrap markets seemed to be awaiting further developments at home and abroad. The Iron Age scrap composite price remained at $15.62.

The publication said steel production this week was affected only slightly by Labor Day shutdowns, the average for the week being estimated at 59 per cent of capacity against 63½ per cent last week. It added:

"Recovery of operations on Tuesday was swift, indicating that next week's operations will be fully 65 per cent."

Woolworth Sales 6.9% Above Year Ago

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—F. W. Woolworth Co. today reported August sales of $24,122,900, an increase of 6.9 per cent from $22,565,635 in August last year. Sales for the first eight months of the year were 5 per cent ahead of the similar 1938 stretch.

W. T. Grant Co

W. T. Grant Co. placed August turnover at $7,210,155, a gain of 5.4 per cent, compared with $6,837,069 a year ago. Sales in the first eight months of this year outstripped the comparable 1938 period by 7.6 per cent.

Eastern Air Lines

Eastern Air Lines, Inc., reported today for the three months ended June 30, net profit of $130,291, equal to 31 cents a share on the common stock, compared with profit of $48,942, or 12 cents a share, in the same period last year. For the six months, profit totaled $363,416, or 87 cents a share, against $147,764, or 35 cents a share, in the 1938 period.

Commodities Continue Rise To New Peaks

By the Associated Press

The war boom in commodities sent prices of grains, wool, sugar and other staples to new peaks yesterday in another session of extraordinary buying.

In some markets, speculators sold sufficiently for profit realizing to cause a reaction. Rubber fell a maximum of about 2½ cents a pound and hides lost about ½ of a cent. But demand outweighed selling in most markets. Dealings in grains were hampered by the reluctance of holders to supply the bids.

Quoted values of farm products continued to mount sharply. Wheat ended up 5 cents, the limit, and corn again moved up the day's allowable of 4 cents in the Chicago pit. Live stock kept pace with the rise, hogs advancing $1 to $1.50 a hundredweight, making a two-day gain of about $2.50. Butter was among foodstuffs at higher levels.

In futures, previous gains were supplemented by net moderate advances in wool, tin, cottonseed oil, silk, hides and copper. For the third session sugar futures were up the limit of ¼ cent. Cotton ended 95 cents to $1.25 a bale higher.

Dealings generally settled down to closer markets as buyers and sellers came nearer together. The New York Commodity Exchange worked out a first-come-first-served arrangement on unfilled orders to facilitate business.

The Associated Press index of 35 staples rose to 71.57 per cent of the 1926 average from 69.31 per cent the previous day. The index was the highest since February, 1938.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Lower in August

New York, Sept. 6.—New York City bank stocks declined moderately during August, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster. From the month's high of 48.53 on August 2, the weighted average of 17 leading issues declined 9.2 per cent to the month's low of 44.02 on August 25. This compared with a 1939 low of 41.19, reached on April 10. The close, August 31, was moderately higher, however, at 44.90, reducing the net decline to 5 per cent for the month.

Insurance stocks on the New York City market also closed lower in August. The weighted average of 20 issues opened August 1 at 52.32, which also was the high point of the month. The list declined to the month's low of 49.26 on August 24, at which point it was 6.2 per cent under the 1939 high of 52.56 reached on July 18, but still 6½ per cent above the 1939 low of 46.22 on April 10. The close on August 31 was at 49.62 for a net loss of 5 per cent for the month.

Grain Prices Rise Limit For 4th Day

Wheat 20 Cents Above August 31 Price; Corn 14 Cents Higher

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 6.—For the fourth consecutive session grain futures in North American markets today soared the 3 to 5 cents limits permitted in a single session.

Wheat on the Board of Trade was nearly 20 cents higher than it was August 31, before hostilities broke out in Europe, or at the best level in a year and a half. Corn was about 14 cents higher. Even at those prices, however, trade was virtually deadlocked with operators unable to fill buying orders for millions of bushels of grain.

Shorts Are Worried

Anxious shorts and industrial interests had brief encouragement when some sales for wheat and corn were made at peak prices and when the first easing in any grains during the past two sessions was temporarily recorded in rye and oats. Offerings, however, tightened in closing trade and all grains in all markets, except oats at Winnipeg, finished at the day's maximum possible advance. On the Board of Trade all grains, except September and December rye, sold at new season highs.

Wheat closed 5 cents higher, September 86⅜, December 86⅞; corn 4 cents up, September 57¾, December 58⅝; oats 3 cents up, rye 5 cents higher, soy beans 4 cents up and lard 50 cents a hundredweight higher.

Pit observers said there were indications some buying orders in wheat were withdrawn overnight and trade was believed to be a little better than that of yesterday, when only 3,997,000 bushels of wheat futures were sold, compared with 16,653,000 a week ago and 30,480,000 a year ago. Total grain futures sales were 6,375,000, compared with 23,565,000 last week and 30,480,000 a year ago. Total grain futures sales were 6,375,000, compared with 23,565,000 last week and 37,808,000 a year ago.

Primary Copper, Zinc and Lead Prices Advance

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Producers of newly-mined copper today began selling the metal to regular customers at 12 cents a pound after going through most of yesterday without posted quotations. The price of 12 cents a pound for newly-mined electrolytic metal for immediate delivery, Connecticut Valley, compared with 12½ cents quoted yesterday by smelting interests.

The 1 cent mark-up in newly-mined, or primary copper, was the latest rise in a series of consecutive advances lifting that type of copper to 12 cents, compared with 10 cents on May 8 last. Not since October, 1937, had primary copper sold as high as 12 cents.

High demand for the nonferrous metal group as a whole was mirrored in trade reports that sales of zinc had been made at 6 cents a pound, East St. Louis base, and that this figure could be regarded as a minimum for the market. Some sellers still refused to post a price.

The 6-cent basis represents a gain of ¼ cent and is the third mark-up in less than a week. It was the highest price paid for zinc since 6.125 cents was quoted in October, 1937.

It also was learned that St. Joseph Lead Co. had withdrawn from the market and had not followed the new price of 5.50 cents a pound for lead set early today.

Willys-Overland To Add 3,000 Workers

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—Production of new models by Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., will result in the immediate employment of 3,000 workers, Joseph W. Frazer, president, announced today. Frazer in announcing the new price range said there was a 12 per cent reduction of $65 in the base price as compared with the 1939 level.

The price list: speedway coupe $495; speedway sedan $545; deluxe coupe $590; deluxe sedan $620; pick up delivery commercial car $525; cabin over engine panel delivery car $700. Prices do not include taxes.

Profit-Taking Checks Rising War Prices Bonds Lower in Record Trading Volume Commodity Futures Reach New Peaks

New York, Sept. 6.—Security markets became more orderly today in their fourth consecutive session of furious trading and while more bonds were turned over than ever before in the history of the stock exchange and the stock volume reached nearly 4,000,000 shares, the price boosters met more resistance than they have encountered since the outbreak of war. Commodities, on the other hand, continued to soar, most futures advancing their limit at the opening at which levels few sellers could be coaxed to dispose of their holdings. The market for the United States Government bonds continued under pressure, with losses again exceeding a point in many issues, but in banking circles it was reported that new buying was making its appearance.

Average Slightly Lower at Close

Price changes of from 1 to 3 points, up and down, were scattered throughout the leading stock issues and the approximate even division between plus and minus signs left the market at the close off the comparatively small average of 0.35 point. The street welcomed the more systematic behaviour of the stock list and the increase in selling orders on the ground that a runaway market, such as we saw Tuesday, would lead to an inevitable collapse and also might bring down upon the financial community further restraints from the government agencies. Thus far the markets have been able to function efficiently and no new restrictions by the exchanges themselves, the securities and exchange commission or the treasury are anticipated.

Trading in stocks on the big board reached 3,942,840 shares compared with 5,932,150 on the previous day when all the so-called war babies were run up sensationally. A few of the shares of this classification continued in favor today but there was the inevitable wave of profit taking and also a desire of investors to sit back for a while to ponder the possible effects of the application of the neutrality act.

The same considerations did not bother the followers of the commodities. On the Chicago board of trade all futures advanced the limit permitted by Government and exchange regulations and few sellers appeared. Thus wheat closed up 5 cents, corn 4 cents, oats 3 cents, rye 5 cents, soy beans 4 cents and similar gains were made in the Winnipeg market, where the exchange moved to increase margin requirements.

Commodity Gains

Other commodities moved in a similar spectacular manner. In most cases the openings were at the limit, but in a few cases there was later liquidation which reduced early advances. Spot rubber, the September delivery, closed off 225 points after its runup of Tuesday and other months were unchanged to 20 points lower. Silk was 2 to 12 cents higher. Lead lost 24 to 35 points, zinc was unchanged to 35 points lower, copper advanced 10 to 27 points, raw hides were off 24 to 25 points, sugar was up 25 cents, coffee had an irregular close at 4 points higher to 6 points lower, cocoa gained 33 to 44 points, wool tops added 26 to 33 points, cottonseed oil jumped 49 to 71 points and cotton advanced 19 to 25 points.

Gains which have taken place in the last four days are already making themselves felt on the consumer's dinner table. The index of 31 commodities, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, made the largest gain in its history for the week ended September 5, jumping 16 cents.

While no regulations on trading were found to be necessary by the New York Exchanges, there were cases of efforts being made to stem the speculative urge. The Montreal stock and curb exchanges lifted their bans against short selling. Abroad there were evidences of a resumption of normal business. The London stock exchange will reopen Thursday and over-the-counter business was transacted today. Tin trading was resumed in London but the session lasted only 15 minutes.

Big Blocks at Opening

The opening on the stock exchange was not as spectacular as on Tuesday, but several big blocks of orders came over the ticker in the early minutes of trading, United States Steel opened with 7,000 shares at 65, off 1¾. There were numerous blocks of from 1,000 to 5,000 shares, but specialists had little difficulty in finding sellers. On the previous day the openings were delayed for hours because of the great preponderance of buying orders.

Trading was exceptionally heavy during the first hour and the ticker was forced to be three or four minutes late in its effort to keep pace with transactions. After that the market became normal and a selling wave developed, which was later turned about by renewed interest in the rails.

Treasury Bonds Unloaded

United States Government securities were poured onto the listed market in a small torrent by frightened holders today until the final hour of formal trading, when the steady buying of the Federal Reserve Bank suddenly was augmented by large scale private acquisitions

Bond dealings were the most active in the history of the New York Stock Exchange, with the turnover of $83,234,000 far exceeding the dealings of the previous day. Treasury bonds accounted for $72,317,000 of the total, and market experts estimated that private buyers took about $5,000,000, while the Federal Reserve added the balance of $67,000,000 to its heavy acquisitions of the three previous sessions. The counter-market buying of the Federal Reserve was sizable, but of less importance than the dealings on the big board.

Bond Market Nervous

The bond market as a whole was nervous, with a tendency in various sections to reverse the movements of Tuesday. Many foreign dollar bonds of the belligerent nations were marked higher after their drastic recessions of the immediate war declaration days. Speculative corporation bonds were in fair demand, and some interest also was taken in the high-grade money market securities of leading corporations.

Chief interest still was centered in the market for Treasury issues. Longest-dated governments were offered in tremendous volume during the first two hours, and the flood then began to slacken, with a turn in the tide indicated soon after 2 p. m. Maturities of the next year or two came into keen demand, and showed improvement for the day from smallest fractions to ¼ point.

Treasury bonds due in ten years or more showed net recessions of 1⅛ to 1⅜ points. The intermediate maturities dropped ⅛ to ⅜ point. Guaranteed bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage and Home Owners Loan Corporations were relatively sable, at net recessions of ¼ point.

Money Rate Rise Feared

Selling of Treasury bonds were again largely of the character reported in previous sessions. Holders who feared a rise in money rates as the world moved into a war economy let their bonds go at the rates fixed by the principal buyer. Some out-of-town banks were said to be liquidating heavily during the early hours, and switching into shortest-term Treasury obligations so that their quarterly statements will show unchanged positions in total holdings. Additional selling came from private holders who decided the stock market might be more attractive.

Private buying orders for Treasury bonds reached the floor of the Stock Exchange at 2:30 p. m. and heartened all observers. It was taken as an indication that the recession is running its course, with yields once again becoming attractive in the event of a turn toward a wartime economy.

In the foreign dollar section the general tendency was upward, although soft spots still were evident in Danish issues and some Australian bonds. German and Polish issues rallied feebly on small trades, and larger gains appeared in Canadian, Japanese and Italian bonds. Latin American issues surged forward on the assumption that the respective economies will be aided by war buying of commodities.

Domestic Issues Firm

High grade domestic corporation bonds turned upward after an unsettled opening. Telephone bonds showed gains of 1 to 2 points, and some of the power and light issues were even more advanced. Best rated rails and industrials also reflected investment buying.

Medium-priced railroad issues were mostly better, although a few issues receded. The gains in this group ranged to 4 points. Borderline and default rails again shared in the upswing. Local tractions were irregular, but communications bonds did well, holding company and convertible bonds advanced sharply, in belated recognition of the equity move of the preceding session.

Cotton Gains 95c to $1.25 More Per Bale

Heavy Textile Sales A Principal Factor In the Advance

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 6.—Cotton futures today extended to nearly $4 a bale the sharp gains scored since the outbreak of the European war. Despite more conservative buying than Tuesday, final prices were up 19 to 25 points.

The prime force in today's advance was buying in the wake of heavy textile sales, brokers said. Foreign interests, notably Bombay, were good buyers and trade accounts lent substantial support. A last minute flurry of short covering carried final prices to the top for the day.

The market weathered hedging sales and cashing in on recent profits in good style.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures closed an excited session today with gains of 49 to 79 points. Swept up by the urgent buying that struck many other commodities, subsequent profit taking and hedging pared top prices.

Sales totaled 531 contracts: September, 7.35 bid; October, 7.44 bid; December, 7.30; January, 7.64 bid; March, 7.76.

Flowers by Wire This Year Set All-Time Record

St. Paul, Sept. 6.—Gifts of flowers by wire during the first seven months of 1939—a dependable index of the $200,000,000 flower industry as a whole—set an all time high. Volume increased 36.5 per cent over the same period in 1929 and was 7 per cent ahead of the first seven months in 1939, according to a report by Albert Barber, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, which opened its thirtieth annual convention today at the St. Paul Hotel.

The dollar volume of sales of flowers by wire during the first seven months of 1939 was 6 per cent ahead of 1938, but was 10.7 per cent under the dollar volume in 1929, the highest year ever recorded for the industry. During the first seven months of 1939, 1,396,624 orders of flowers costing $4,918,460 were sent by wire. During the same period in 1929, 1,031,034 orders were sent by wire with a gross dollar volume of $5,504,506.

This increased sales volume in flowers by wire was closely paralleled by sales gains in the retail flower industry as a whole, Mr. Barber reported. Employement in the industry made similar gains. Mr. Barber estimated gross volume of the flower industry as a whole as over 200,000,000 with employment of more than 200,000.

Am. Agricultural Votes 30c Per Share

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Directors of American Agricultural Chemical Co. today declared a dividend of 30 cents a share on common stock, payable September 29 to holders of record September 18. Previous payment in June was 35 cents a share.

War Market Booms Toll Telephone Calls

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Telephone toll calls rang up a record-breaking business Tuesday, as the wires hummed with orders to "buy, buy" in markets of every description on the war boom. The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced today that the record volume of long-distance telephone calls handled at 14 operating offices of the long lines was 30 per cent above the usual figure for a Tuesday following Labor Day. The 155,498 calls recorded at the reporting offices, it was noted, surpassed the previous record of 148,828 last Friday, when news of the German invasion of Poland touched business with war buying fever.

Cotton Goods Sales Near Day's Record

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Heavy buying of cotton goods again swept Worth street textile markets. Dealers said orders were rolling in almost as fast as yesterday when sales of all types of gray goods totaled around 150,000,000 yards, one of the biggest single day's business in history. Traders said commitments made thus far this week would keep most mills operating at capacity levels throughout the fourth quarter. There was slowing in orders in some textile divisions, but sales of print cloths today were at a rate which it was thought would not lag far under the preceding session's 80,000,000 yards.

Allies to Pay For Planes Even If Not Shipped

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—American aircraft factories continued top-speed work today on 600 planes ordered by France, England and Australia.

Aircraft circles said no stoppage was indicated in work on between $45,000,000 and $50,000,000 of foreign orders for planes and parts, because of invocation of the neutrality act.

It was pointed out that even though shipments of the finished planes abroad is cancelled by the neutrality laws, plane makers are protected. Their contracts with France, Britain and Australia specify that in the event the laws hold up shipments abroad, delivery of the finished planes can be made in the United States. In other words, payment to the aircraft companies for the planes is to be made in the same manner as if shipment abroad could be continued.

The principal effect of invoking of neutrality legislation so far as plane companies is concerned, it was said, is uncertainty regarding additional orders from foreign buyers.

August Steel Output Highest in 2 Years

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—August production of 3,763,718 gross tons of open hearth and Bessemer steel ingots was the highest monthly output since September, 1937, the American Iron & Steel Institute said today.

This was 19 per cent above the revised July figure of 3,162,534 tons and nearly 50 per cent ahead of 2,537,102 produced in August last year.

Bell Telephone Reports August Gains

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—The principal operating subsidiaries in the Bell System gained 52,400 telephones in August, compared with an August gain of 35,300 last year and 53,100 in 1937, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported today.

Subsidy Cotton Sales 1,180,174 Bales in Aug.

The Agriculture Department said yesterday that sales of raw cotton and cotton products for export under the new subsidy program totaled 1,180,174 bales during August. Of this 29,929 bales represented cotton products. Under the export program, designed to enable this country to double foreign sales of cotton this season, a bounty of 1.5 cents a pound is paid on exports of raw cotton and an equivalent payment on exports of cotton products.

The department said cotton actually shipped during August totaled 278,000 bales compared with 236,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Archibald's Eye Is Cut in Drill

"He'll knock out Archibald, and it won't take so long either," Heinie promised, not naming the round. "The records will bear us out. Just show us a guy Archibald's fought who Jeffra hasn't laid away. Look at Escobar—he beat Archibald. We beat him three times."

Despite Jeffra's supporting points, Archibald will be about an 8-to-5 favorite at ringtime, according to usually well-informed fight observers. This might be laid to the fact that he is the champion, however.

"But just wait until he starts that jumping around—the first time he jumps up in the air, Harry will nail him and the fight will be over," Blaustein insisted.

Joey, short and closely knit, fights a leaping, kangeroo-like battle. Against the rangier Jeffra, who stands several inches taller, Archibald can be expected to call on his peculiar attack even more often.

Neither fighter is worried about making the 126-pound feather limit. Both are natural 122-pounders—in fact, their main effort is to get all the vitamins and proteins they can before the fight in order to build themselves up.

As the fight date nears, the ticket sale increases, Turner and Ahearn announced happily yesterday. They are predicting a $20,000 gate. The advance sale is nearing the $3,000 mark, and approximately 5,000 Baltimore fans are expected to seek tickets for the title bout. Archibald will work in public again today at 1:15 in Turner's Arena, while Jeffra will return to Baltimore.

Jeffra, whose mother is always near his corner to cheer for him, explained yesterday that he did not think much of the public workouts.

"I like to work by myself, where it's quiet and there are not so many people to take my mind off the fight," he confided over a bottle of ale after his workout.

Inter-Amercian Show Canceled Due to War

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Inter-American Horse Show Association, announced Tuesday that because of the war in Europe the October event has been called off for 1939. Depending as it does on the entries of international military teams, postponement of the classic was thought advisable. If conditions improve overseas, however, the affair may be resumed in 1940, it was announced.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's quiz questions are taken from G. Melville Smith's examination in the British Bridge Magazine.

1. Playing a jump raise forcing to game, South deals, neither side is vulnerable:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	4 ♣
4 ♠	Pass	?

(a) What should North infer from South's second bid?
(b) Why?

2. Playing a jump raise forcing to game, South deals, neither side is vulnerable:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	4 ♣
Pass

(a) What does South's pass imply?
(b) Why?

3. The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♣	"I double 3 ♡"

What is the law, attention having been drawn at once to the error?

4. The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	?

North holds:

♠ K 6 2
♡ K 5 3
◇ Q 5 4
♣ J 10 8 3

(a) Which two responses might North make?
(b) Which would you choose?
(c) Why not the other one?

5. The bidding, with both sides vulnerable:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass

(a) What does three clubs imply?
(b) Why?

Answers to Quiz

1. (a) Extra values.

(b) It is a free bid, four clubs having washed out the force.

2. (a) A forcing pass.

(b) North's jump raise assured that a game bid would be reached or a business double made; so South leaves it to North to decide.

3. East has doubled two clubs and West must pass when next it is his turn to call.

4. (a) Two spades or one no trump.

(b) Two spades.

(c) Because if South bid two spades over one no trump, you would probably bid three spades, too high a level. North's response of two spades relieves him of further responsibility.

5. (a) A sign off.

(b) Two clubs is a weak response, and three clubs confirm this. North sees no game and thinks three clubs is the safest contract.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

SOMETHING of a minor revolution is brewing in the Department of Commerce. If we are to believe an earnest if not quite unimpeachable source, the powers that be are threatening one of the "few pleasures in life open to a Government employe"—namely, eating.

The Post's unofficial correspondent states that with a regimentation of diet worthy of German war rationing the Commerce Cafeteria now operates on a strict beans and bread policy, and at 25 cents a crack.

It's not the money, it appears, but the principle of the thing. A plebiscite of Commerce employes reveals a practically unanimous sentiment, not for lower prices, but for something smacking of variety in the daily bill of fare.

Specifically, they would like the choice of two out of five vegetables in their 25-cent lunches, instead of the two out of two, or two out of three allegedly offered at present. Why? Because, it is logically stated, two out of two people hate two out of any three common vegetables. Hence, the desired margin of two or three more.

Finally, the last source of annoyance: the size of portions of salads are considered to be too small.

MOTHER NATURE has crossed up Yellowstone Park rangers again, with a near-flood (like Washington's of Monday night) resulting.

Two new gushing torrents suddenly broke ground. This is nothing unusual, but the routine is that when new springs break an old one dies. This time none died, and the general flow of water is the highest in several years.

BULLETIN: MOBILIZATION IN YELLOWSTONE PARK.

A high-powered speedboat, new on the lake this summer, began making regular patrols this week. At the same time CCC enrollees were rushing to completion a new cabin cruiser which will be launched next spring. A third boat capable of carrying large quantities of freight will also be put in shape for heavy usage next summer.

Yellowstone's navy will be used for general patrolling, for fire fighting, for transporting supplies, and for emergency rescues, and to aid in fighting fires in remote sections of the Park.

IN CASE there are any Government employes who haven't seen the World of Tomorrow, Saturday is District Day at the fair and special train accommodations are being arranged for those going in groups.

Mr. Oliver Short, director of personnel in the Commerce Department, is in charge of getting commerce employes organized for the event. If 50 employes go from the Patent Office they will ride in style in a special air-conditioned coach. For information, see Harry Goldsmith, Room 4886B in the Commerce Building. Reservations must be in by Sept. 7.

AND THEN there's Ferdinand the Beaver out in Yellowstone Park.

Occasionally, he glides over to an aspen tree for a nip of the bark. But, work. No! Ferdinand's an aesthete.

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter 26

DYER

NEVER MIND. Sufficient that it stopped the immediate advance. I was so full of relief at this truce, however temporary, that there was little room in my attention to notice a faint splash far off somewhere in the fog. I kept the little cylinder in my teeth and my eyes on the four baleful emeralds burning on the sand before me, and cautiously began to lower one hand to get at the handle of the knife Adriana had made me fasten to my belt. As soon as they saw this movement, the beasts started to close in on me again. I stopped, my hand halfway down, and blew the whistle again. They stopped again.

And there the three of us stood, frozen in a sort of stalemate. If I stirred, they advanced and stopped me. If they advanced, I sounded the whistle again, and stopped them. This uneasy mutual hypnotism plainly could not last long; the distance was closing between us; my fingers were still far from the buttoned strap which held the hilt of the knife in its sheath. For each inch I gained they took a foot. Every foot they gained made it more likely that their next move would be to spring.

Our tableau was interrupted by a noise, a noise so homely and unexpected that it snatched at my attention, and so clearly heard that I realized for the first time how silently our three spirits had been wrestling there in the night. It was the wurra-wurra-wurra of a large wet dog treating himself to a hearty shake. And it was immediately followed by what sounded for all the world like a horse galloping up the beach.

I saw my two antagonists flinch, and their eyes shift.

"My friends," I said exultantly, "you varmints had better run. Here comes the United States cavalry."

With that, I blew the whistle again, and dropped my hand to the knife at my belt.

An instant later, a vast dark figure cannonballed along the fence outside, drew up with a rattle of sand against the wire mesh, sniffed twice, and then began to pace back and forth in short casts, letting out anxious whines.

Now the two police dogs really wavered, and then turned snarling to warn the intruder away from their supper.

"Good boy!" I told him. "Good boy!" If the racket of his coming had not attracted the notice of Raskin & Co., then no small word of praise of mine could do so. The speedboat must be well offshore.

THIS WAS MY moment as I saw it, and the only moment I was likely to get. My enemies thought themselves taken in the flank; in an instant they must realize that my reinforcement could not reach me.

I dropped the whistle from between my teeth, put the end of the flashlight in its place, whipped out the knife, and dived for the larger dog. If I had any conscious plan, it was to get hold of the scruff of his neck with my left hand and in the same second drive the knife into the woolly base of his throat. But he was too alert for me, and his mane was too thick. My fingers closed upon nothing but hair, and this he yanked from my grasp at once by a swift sidewise wriggle. The knifestroke went wild, and worst of all, he jerked me off balance. I stumbled, went on one knee, and the flashlight was jarred out of my mouth. Then something heavy and flying hard (the other dog, I suppose—they were a pretty team of thugs) struck me between the shoulders, and I went flat. The two animals wasted no time in closing in, and the fat was in the fire for fair. Me being the fat.

The only thing I knew I must do was to hang on to my weapon. I did so, and also managed to get my left hand in under my body where it couldn't be reached. I buried my face in the sand, and held myself rigid. The dogs hesitated, then one set his forefeet in the small of my back, and began methodically to rip the windbreaker off me. The other one started to investigate my head, and I expected any moment to lose an ear.

With only one on top of me I would have risked rolling over into a position where I could use my knife, but with two, even supposing I disabled one, the other would tear my face off before I could put him out of action.

It never struck me that The MacGlashan might be able to get across the fence. Where he took off for what must have been an Olympic leap over those hungry barbs I have not found out yet. (I looked later—I wanted to measure it.) Evidently he chose some outside dune to start from, and in he came. The first thing I knew, he had arrived. I learned of his arrival because he immediately began a first-class dogfight squarely on my shoulder blades. And when 300-odd pounds of prancing dog is maneuvering across your back, you know it.

The tide of conflict rolled away after a time from its unwilling battlefield, and I was able to breathe again and raise my head. The fight was raging dimly in a shifting pattern of shadows up and down between the fence and the building wall. A low ghastly chorus of the voices of dogs bent on committing murder, and loving it, issued from the opening and closing group.

I jumped to my feet, grabbing for my flashlight (which lay still shining aimlessly along the trampled sand), and fearing for The MacGlashan. He was bigger than either of his assailants, but less heavily furred and lighter than the sum of both. Moreover this was his first serious fight, and he was pitted against a tight team of trained fighters who meant death.

ALL THREE were of the wolf breed, and their warfare was the warfare of movement. They closed in and slashed; recoiled and attacked again. I got the light on them, and saw blood on the jaws of both police dogs, and a wet red shine on The MacGlashan's chest. He was fighting mostly with the bigger of the two, and when he and his opponent rose up on their hind legs to slash at each other, he towered above the other dog. But each time, The MacGlashan's teeth would only tear tufts of mane from the other; and each time the other would get in a crafty rip somewhere near the staghound's throat. At the same time the smaller police dog would sneak in from behind, and try to hamstring the great gray Scot.

The sight made me all but blind with fury; I can't remember a time when I have become so mad so fast. There seemed to my eyes something noble and chivalrous and amateurish about The MacGlashan's every movement; something cowardly and expert about the actions of the other two. The picture was that of a gallant gentleman cornered by a pair of hired assassins.

I ran in straightaway, got a grip on the tail of the smaller dog with my left hand, and yanked his jaws clear of the staghound's leg. When he spun on me with a vicious snarl, I stabbed him twice through the side with all my strength. The blade went in to the hilt both times, and I felt the warm fur on my curled thumb and forefinger.

On the last stroke his ribs closed over the knife and I had difficulty withdrawing it. For a second his teeth fumbled with my wrist, but the sweater and cuff of the windbreaker saved the skin, and in point of fact he was a dead beast even as he bit me. Almost at once a shudder ran through him, his spine flexed the other way, and the blade that had killed him came out quite easily. It was followed by a black spurt, burning hot like Fafnir's blood, which drenched my hand. I knew he was done for, and paid no more attention to him. I suppose he staggered off a little distance before going down for good, because I cannot remember noticing him alive after that.

I had dropped the flashlight again, of course, and again it was still glowing faithfully on the sand. Before picking it up, I made an effort to wipe my right hand clean under my left armpit, with the sole result that I got both hands thoroughly sticky, and the flashlight as well. So I gave up the effort and turned the beam on The MacGlashan's duel.

THE SIGHT was enough to scare anybody, the way those huge animals tore at each other, the wild fury of them, and the hoarse depth of their dispute. The staghound was thoroughly aroused for the first time in his life, and no voice on earth could have called him off now. The other dog was a murderer to his marrow. The two were evenly matched; the police dog, while smaller, was more compact and skillful, and his vitals were quilted thick with fur.

I closed in on them, but saw no way to interfere without danger of knifing the wrong one. When The MacGlashan had been strung out between enemies they had all held much the same relative places; now the two fighters kept dancing round each other in a bewildering pinwheel of hairy flanks and gleaming snapping teeth. So I followed along with the torch, and simply let the staghound finish his own fight. Only once, when the police dog got on top and started to rip open The MacGlashan's bare belly, I kicked him off; and toward the end, when he quit and tried to run, I blocked his way. A few moments later the staghound drove his enemy into the southeast corner of the fence, bore him down, rolled him over, and got his first good hold on the other's throat.

Then happened the most amazing detail of all that amazing battle. The MacGlashan of Rannoch, instead of slowly choking the police dog to death (as I thought he must do with so large an enemy), heaved back with a mighty effort until he had lifted the other clean off the ground. And having done so, he killed the police dog by shaking him until his neck was broken. In perhaps five seconds, as a matter of fact, he shook hard enough to break a dozen necks. I leave you to judge how much strength and fury was needed for this feat. My guess is that the police dog weighed over 80 pounds. Try lifting that in your teeth.

Suddenly everything was very still and peaceful and satisfactory. The staghound was standing looking down, in a sort of alert surprise, on the limp carcass before him. There was no doubt about the fight's being over. The tawny woolly body lay with the head doubled clean under it out of sight. It was obviously the most thoroughly dead dog in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts at that moment.

The MacGlashan was panting like a locomotive and his tongue lolled far out, but somehow his dignity was unruffled. His chest was matted and wetly gleaming, one ear had been badly torn, but as I drew in on him I could not see on his coat anywhere (as I feared to see) the bright red spurt from a ripped artery.

Pine Launches War Against Dope Peddlers

Narcotics Blamed For Serious Crimes Recorded in City

District Attorney Pine yesterday instructed his staff to prosecute narcotic peddlers with uncompromising severity, to destroy any underworld impression that Washington is a "soft spot."

The District Attorney pointed out that use of narcotics has been blamed for other serious offenses and called attention to the increase in the number of narcotics cases here in the last six months.

"The agents of the Narcotics Bureau," Pine said, "reported to me last spring that a large number of the serious crimes could be attributed to the use of narcotics. The Criminal Justice Association has come to the same conclusion.

"At the judicial conference of the Fourth Circuit last June, I made some inquiry about narcotic cases in adjoining States and came to the conclusion that the problem is more acute here than in the adjoining States. The agents of the Narcotic Bureau gave me the same information last spring. I believe this is attributable to the fact that the peddlers believe Washington is a 'soft spot.'

"Please bear these facts in mind in connection with any narcotic cases which are assigned to you for trial or presentation to the grand jury and handle them uncompromisingly and with severity. This is particularly necessary in connection with the peddlers. I want the word to go out by our conduct in these cases that the 'percentages' for the dope peddlers are not favorable in the District."

Red Cross Course 'For Men Only' Here Tonight

"A unique course for men only in home hygiene and care of the sick" will begin at 7:30 p. m. today at the District Chapter House, 1730 E street northwest, it was announced yesterday.

"The novel . . . course," officials said, "has been scheduled to meet the needs of an increasing number of unprepared men . . . faced with caring for infants and invalids."

$14,370 in Missing Coupons Turn Up In San Diego

Ten negotiable bond coupons, valued at $1,437 each, believed stolen from the coat pocket of Dr. Don Enrique Carlos de la Casa, former First Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, as he tried on a suit of clothes in a Washington department store on June 3, 1937, have appeared in a San Diego, Calif., bank, Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of deteceives, was notified yesterday.

The coupons, it was said, were sent to the San Diego bank from a bank in Mexico. An effort is being made to trace down the person who sought to cash the coupons in Mexico.

Dr. de la Casa removed his coat in the store while another was being fitted. The coupons and $600 in cash were gone when he put on the old coat.
